Despite High Finance, Ladies Hear About Russia. J. J. Corbett, Object Lesson. The Pope's Firm Protest.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 18.

IN SPITE of objections from highest financial authority, including Secretary Mellon, the House approves overwhelmingly 363 to 39, the bill to let veterans borrow one-half the value of their war certificates. If they all borrow one half, Uncle Sam will have to pay out more than fifteen hundred million dollars, and high finance says that will be ruinous.

AS A RULE, "big money," which means ability, should receive respectful attention, as does the captain of a ship, but high finance is sometimes mistaken. Big bankers said the Federal Reserve System would ruin the country, because it kept a few men from controlling all the money. They were wrong. Without the Federal Reserve this country would have had a black panic, long ago. They may be wrong in their idea that handing a billion dollars to those that need it, and earned it, will ruin us now.

WE SPENT, gave away and wasted billions by the dozens, in the war, and prosperity did not die. Perhaps some spending at home now will help, instead of hurting. Knowledge is piled up in libraries, the problem is to distribute it. Water is accumulated in lakes and rivers, and distribution is the problem. Money is piled up in financial institutions, a glut of money, the owners cannot lend it. Perhaps distribution there will help.

AMERICAN LADY patriots listening here for three hours, are assured that Russia threatens our institutions, and this land is practically the last refuge of good government, as opposed to Red Russian ideas. Dr. Patmont of California went to Russia, "fooled the secret police, went just wherever he pleased, and saw things behind the scenes that Americans less intelligent never see." He saw young girls standing in bread lines "with babies born illegitimately under this Soviet system." He saw "wild children, offspring of free love, sanctioned by the Soviet system, roaming around, until they were killed as pests by villagers and their bodies burned."

ACCORDING TO Dr. Patmont, killing folks and burning them, seems to be an important feature of Russian life. If Red Russia upsets our government, takes all the money away from Mellon, Rockefeller, Baker and Ford, and gives free divorce to everybody, "with wild children, roaming around," in consequence, it will not be the fault of Dr. Patmont. He has warned this government.

MEANWHILE THOSE Russians, enemies of capitalism, do a little capitalistic business on their own account. An American firm, the Eithington Schild Company, has contracted to buy fifty million dollars worth of furs from Russia, ten million dollars worth every year, for five years.

And this government, recovering from its Russophobia in a lucid interval, approves the transaction. Also Russia's government spends more than ours and has a surplus, instead of a deficit, and every man in Russia has a job, whether he wants it or not. No idle class allowed. Such a country should be able to feed its wild children.

IT PAYS to care for your health. In the Biltmore Hotel, here, you may see James J. Corbett, who long ago took the world's heavyweight championship from John L. Sullivan, looking not older than 40. His hair is thick, and dark, his voice as strong as when he fought his big fights. His weight is not 10 pounds above what it was in training, and his chest measurement is at least 10 inches greater than his waist measurement, as it should be.

"EAT LITTLE and at regular hours, plenty of fruit, never eat quite as much as you think you want, and never eat unless you are really hungry. Cut down on food, when you cut down on work, as you would do for a horse. Take regular exercise, suited to your age, daily baths. Health is man's normal condition. He must do something foolish to lose it. A man should live long and die peacefully and painlessly, like a child going to sleep." Thus spoke James J. Corbett.

A GROUP of Italian priests, begging the Pope to "defend the souls of our parishoners Satanically besieged and daily exposed to tremendous perils," called from the Pope a protest against Mussolini's government of great historical importance. The Pope said that "through some high phenomenon of telepathy," he had arrived at the same conclusion... and then formulated his grounds on serious complaint against the Mussolini government.

HE FORMALLY accused the government of permitting and encouraging "the triple evil of immoral newspapers, motion pictures and vaudeville shows," and protested, with especial earnestness against government countenancing "of Protestant propaganda, "to an extent that surprises even the Protestants."

THE POPE shows physical as well as mental courage in his criticisms of Mussolini's conduct and failure to live up to the Lateran treaty, as the Pope understands it. Mussolini, who was an extreme radical before he rose to power, is not religious at heart and not fond of criticism. The Pope's tiny dominion lies in the hollow of Mussolini's hand, and Europe must wonder what would hap-

Hoover Intimates Veto, But Senate Committee Gives Approval to Measure

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—President Hoover's disapproval of the soldiers' loan bill had little effect today in halting its speedy progress toward enactment.

Within a few hours after the President had sent a strong warning letter to Senator Smoot, vigorously expressing his objections to the measure, the Senate Finance Committee reported the bill favorably and the Senate then agreed to take it up tomorrow, when both sides predicted it would be passed.

Every proposed amendment to bring the measure in line to meet Mr. Hoover's objections, including one by Senator Reed, (Rep.), of Pennsylvania to restrict loans to those who have already borrowed, was promptly voted down, and the bill was reported to the Senate floor exactly as it passed the House.

VOTE 13 TO 3

The vote to favorably report the bill was 13 to 3. Senator Smoot, (Rep.), of Utah; Reed, (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, and Bingham, (Rep.), of Connecticut, constituted the minority.

President Hoover's letter was communicated to the Senate Finance Committee this morning when it met to consider the bill, which passed the House on Monday by the overwhelming vote of 363 to 39.

After a long analysis of his objections to the measure, Mr. Hoover concluded his indictment of it in these words:

"Placing a strain on the savings needed for rehabilitation of employment by a measure which calls on the government for a vast sum beyond the call of distress, and so adversely affecting our general situation, it will, in my view, not only nullify the benefits to the veterans, but inflict injury to the country as a whole."

"For the present no applicants will be given work excepting those who are now receiving welfare assistance from a recognized charitable organization. Numbered cards will be used in selecting men for any job and none will be chosen by name."

Mr. Phillips stated consideration will be given to skill in any trade and to the degree of necessity for help, as indicated by records on the cards of the welfare agencies.

The statement was made at a meeting of Chamber of Commerce Trade Councils, for the purpose of answering publicly many inquiries received at the association headquarters.

Butler, Due Here, Hints Capone Deportation

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 18.—(AP.)—Alphonse Capone, Chicago's gangland chief, will be deported to Italy when public opinion is aroused, it was predicted by Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler in an address here last night.

Butler said:

"When public opposition is aroused Capone will go back to Italy—but I can't talk about Italy."

The remark was one of a few referring indirectly to the Mussolini-Butler imbroglio made before the Knife and Fork Club, whose members he addressed on the subject of the Causes and Cures of Crime.

The former Marine commander recently was censured for a speech in which he related an episode of which he had been told, describing Premier Mussolini, of Italy, as a hit-and-run driver.

He engaged in a blustery expostulation at the start of his speech with news reel men whom he finally permitted to set up cameras and incandescent lamps before the speaker's table.

Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, stormy petrel of the United States Marine Corps, will speak on "Crime and Criminology," Saturday evening at 8:30 at the dinner in Hotel William Penn by Group Eight, Pennsylvania Bankers' Association. Fred C. Kelly, author and humorist, will talk on "What I Know About the Stock Market."

James Francis Burke, general counsel of the Republican National Committee, will be toastmaster.

ALFONSO PICKS ROYALIST AS PREMIER

Monarch Emerges Victorious From Political Crisis; Crowds Welcome Queen

By THOMAS A. LOAYZA.
International News Service.

MADRID, Feb. 18.—Determined to continue his reign as absolute monarch of Spain, King Alfonso XIII today defied his implacable foes and placed the government of his country in the hands of a Royalist group headed by Admiral Juan Bautiste Aznar as premier.

Admiral Aznar's cabinet took over the reins of government from the cabinet of Gen. D'Amaso Berenguer this afternoon, after taking the oath of allegiance to the King at the royal palace shortly after noon.

UNCERTAINTY ENDS

Thus ended, at least for the time being, the period of political uncertainty which has existed in Spain since last Saturday when Gen. Berenguer resigned, and which led to reports of possible revolutionary movements, another military dictatorship and even abdication by the King.

In solving the crisis as he did, King Alfonso once again proved himself the most astute politician of them all.

Before calling upon his friends and supporters to form a government, he gave his enemies, Constitutionalists, Republicans and Socialists, every opportunity to get together and take charge of the government.

QUEEN WELCOMED

Having proved that the political elements opposed to him were unable to agree and combine against him, the King had also proved that without the monarch the political situation in Spain would undoubtedly be more chaotic than ever.

If King Alfonso had any idea of fleeing before his foes, the popular reception accorded to Queen Victoria last night when she arrived from London undoubtedly had much influence in strengthening his determination to stick by his guns.

Admiral Fiske Censures Statesmen for Neglect Of Navy Program

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—(Universal.)—This country's statesmen were accused last night of deliberately seeking to confuse the American people on the true strength of their Navy, in a radio address by Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske (retired), a director of the National Security League.

Speaking over the Columbia system from WABC, Admiral Fiske stated that, if statesmen had had an adequate Navy at the beginning of the World War, America need not have entered the war. He said:

"The refusal of your statesmen to harken to the Navy's advice was the cause of all the graves of American soldiers in France."

Turning to the London Naval Conference in 1930 Admiral Fiske said:

"The most important statement made to you by certain statesmen of the American delegation was untrue. That statement was that they had obtained naval parity with Great Britain. On the contrary, they had perpetuated American naval inferiority.

"Naval strength consists of three elements, the fleet, the merchant marine and the naval bases. These elements are, on the whole, of equal importance. The only element in which the majority of American delegates made any effort toward parity was in the fleets. But they did not attain even that."

Declaring that in the next war this country will be in a perilous position, the admiral said:

"Your economic prosperity rests ultimately on your ability to defend it. Your prosperity may mount to dizzy heights. But it can be absolutely shattered and your commerce ousted from every sea by one naval battle lasting two hours, if your fleet is defeated as the Russian fleet was defeated by the Japanese."

Pershing Defied Foch on Troops

Conflicts between Pershing and Foch over transportation of American troops strengthened the prestige of the A. E. F. commander abroad. An encounter in which Pershing defied the newly-appointed generalissimo of the Allied armies is one of the high spots of today's installment of Gen. John J. Pershing's memoirs, appearing in the Sun-Telegraph exclusively in Pittsburgh.

PLEAS MADE FOR BLONDE AND DAGUE

Attorneys Fight to Prevent First State Execution Of Woman in 50 Years

By AL GOUGH.
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 18.—Citing that no woman has been executed in Pennsylvania for nearly 50 years, Attorney Percy Allen Rose today before the State Board of Pardons, pleaded for the life of Irene Shrader.

The blonde gunwoman and her companion, W. Glenn Dague, are sentenced to die next Monday in the electric chair at Rockview for the murder of Corp. Brady Paul, of the State Highway Patrol, unless commutation or reprieve is granted.

After hearing the arguments and letters sent by Irene and Dague asking clemency the board recessed for lunch. A decision was expected late today.

Special Prosecutor Charles J. Margiotti insisted that the killing of Paul was "wilful, deliberate and vicious" and that the board should permit the sentence of the court to stand.

At the conclusion of Margiotti's argument a member of the board asked:

"Is it upon your conscience now that any injustice has been done."

Margiotti replied:

"I feel sorry for her, but as a matter of conscience I will go to my grave without any regret."

PLEADS FOR WOMAN

Rose, wearing in his lapel a red carnation presented him by Irene, concluded an impassioned address to the Pardon Board with these words:

"No matter who or what Irene was—the fact remains she is a woman, and in this great commonwealth no woman has paid the death penalty for nearly 50 years."

Secretary of the Commonwealth Richard J. Beamish, a member of the board, inquired:

"Do you, Mr. Rose, make your argument seriously to this board

'NO WOMAN SHOULD DIE,' PLEA TO SAVE IRENE SHRADER

STATE BOARD HOLDS FATE OF BLONDE

Counsel Argues Against Electrocution; 'Never Had Chance,' Rose Asserts

[illegible] that no woman should be executed."

Rose:

"I do.

"Why?

"Because honorable gentlemen, my conception of womanhood involves such high standards. As I am the son of a mother I cannot condone the taking of a mother's life."

"Then you think no woman can be guilty of murder."

"Oh, yes."

OPPOSES EXECUTION

"I don't think she should be executed.

Mr. Farmer: Mr. Rose, recalls Clearfield county coal operator who testified [illegible] on behalf of the doomed girl, was at attorney's listening in the courtroom.

Rose: I feel that the blonde has not been given a fair and impartial trial.

He said:

"If the jury had give fair consideration it would have learned who Irene Shrader really was. Who was she? She was the fifteenth child of a mother who didn't want her."

Attorney General William A. Schnader, also a member of the board, [illegible] Rose before the bench and cautioned him on his charge that Irene was not given a fair trial.

He asked Rose:

"Who comprised this jury and upon what do you base this serious charge?"

Rose referred to [illegible] Attorney Dickey, W. Dickey, as the attorney general pursued his query:

"Did you argue this contention before the Supreme Court? You know, Mr. Rose, we do not want to put ourselves in the position of reversing our high tribunal."

FAIR TRIAL HOPELESS

Rose said he was part of the offer and explained his reasons for making the application. He said:

"The feverish excitement and public clamor for revenge in the state highway patrolman's death in my opinion prejudiced the jury—they exhausted panel after panel in their search for a venue and there is no doubt in my mind that a fair trial was impossible."

Attorney Benjamin Jarrett also wearing a carnation presented by the blonde, followed Rose. He raised the question as to who fired the fatal shot.

Jarrett said:

"There was not a man or a woman in Lawrence County who did not strive to serve on that jury.

"Every one admitted under examination they had read about the case and discussed it, but they qualified by their oath that they would not be biased in their opinion."

Attorney Dickey read over the list of those which called the fate of Irene and Dague, identifying each one as to occupation, residence and other individualities. In support of the contention that the trial was unfair and partial he told of having been taken aside by a juror after the trial and told that the prosecutor of another attorney spoiled their chances.

LAWYERS NOT PAID

Secretary Beamish interrogated Dickey concerning his connection with the case. He asked how much money had been [illegible] for the defense.

Dickey replied:

"I'm glad you asked that question—I've never told this in public before.

"I have never received a penny for my service. Neither has my associate, Mr. Jarrett. We were retained by the family, they have no money. There was a sum of $[illegible] sent to Irene for a story printed under her name and for which she has since denied authorship. This money was turned over to her by us because she had it coming to her.

"We owe $400 for the printing expenses necessary to the appeal and Mr. Jarrett and I shall pay that."

District Attorney John S. Powers, of Lawrence county, reviewed the case preceding the trial here and requested the board to uphold the court's sentence.

MARGIOTTI ARGUES

Margiotti, [illegible] Powers declaring he came before the board expecting to hear some new angle, some new fact showing extenuating circumstances in support of their plea for mercy. He said:

"There has been nothing given here to this board that has not been gone into very thoroughly and completely during the Commonwealth's investigation and the trial of these people."

Retelling the state's story of Irene's and Dague's career of crime, Margiotti said:

"Here they were, ready for anything—Irene had a .38-caliber pistol, Glenn had a .32, Tom Crawford, Irene's brother, had a new .32, which he had just purchased that day.

"Dennie Irene's four-year-old son was not armed."

If Irene and Dague lose their fight today their only hope lies in a reprieve by Gov. Pinchot. Should he refuse she will be the first woman in Pennsylvania to die in the electric chair.

Hearing of Irene's case was delayed for an hour by arguments on other cases today.

Shortly before the hearing opened word was received from the executive mansion that a respite had been granted to Wilford Flood of Luzerne County who had been sentenced to die Monday along with Irene and Dague.

CLIMAX OF DRAMA

Today's hearing was the climax to a tense drama which had its beginning back in the West Virginia hills where both Irene and Dague spent most of their lives. Drifting away from married lives which proved irksome they found solace in each others company and [illegible] in a career of crime. All of the evil more is being laid before the five members of Gov. Gifford Pinchot's cabinet who comprise the Board of Pardons.

The board comprised of Lieut. Gov. E. C. Shannon, Secretary of the Commonwealth Richard J. Beamish, Attorney General William A. Schnader and Secretary of Internal Affairs James F. Woodward will make its recommendations to Gov. Pinchot. Should the recommendations be advantageous to the doomed sweethearts, their death warrant is officially sealed. There would be one chance left for them—another ordeal by a pennsylvania reprieve. He could grant a stay of execution to permit a thorough but nothing more.

DECISION WITH GOVERNOR

Even then the commutation [illegible] be forwarded to the governor's office. The Governor is authorized to [illegible] commutation to [illegible] which [illegible] He may, if he so desires, [illegible] execution [illegible] The recommendation of the Board of Pardons is peculiar only if it upholds the sentence of the courts.

Mrs. Mountz said:

"If this execution goes through, it will be the greatest example of gross injustice in the history of Pennsylvania.

"She didn't have the ghost of a chance during her trial. It's the old story of the poor being punished and the rich allowed to go free.

"There were so many things to work against. It is a shame and a gross injustice.

"All I want to see is that justice is done."

The last woman executed in this state was Catherine Miller, who was hanged in Lycoming County for murder, February 3, 1882. No woman has been executed by electrocution in Pennsylvania.

DAVIS WILL TRY SENATE POWER BOARD SUIT

1924 Democratic Nominee To Test Right to Oust Smith Despite Hoover

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18. —(AP.)— John W. Davis, Democratic presidential candidate in 1924, was selected today to represent the Senate in its court test of the right to office of Chairman George Otis Smith, of the Power Commission.

Davis' selection and acceptance was announced today by Senator Walsh (Dem.) of Montana, who has led the Senate controversy with President Hoover over the Power Commission.

The former presidential candidate notified the committee he would arrive in Washington as soon as possible to discuss the case and open legal proceedings.

The selection of Davis, acknowledged as one of the foremost lawyers in the country, assures a "spectacular" trial of the constitutional conflict which has arisen between the President and the Senate over Smith's position.

The Senate rejected the nomination of Smith after once approving it. President Hoover, however, denied the legality of the Senate's reconsideration and retained the chairman in office.

It is believed that Attorney-General Mitchell may personally represent the President in the court test, which members of the Senate Judiciary Committee believe will eventually go to the Supreme Court.

GIRL, MAN HURT IN MINE RIOT

JEANNETTE, Pa., Feb. 18.—A 14-year-old girl and one miner were injured early today when a riot broke out at the mine of the John Carr Coal Company at Edna No. 1, between 125 miners on strike at the Hillman Coal and Coke Company at Edna No. 2 and employes of the John Carr mine.

Twenty-six men and four women were arrested by a detail of 10 state police hurriedly summoned from Greensburg.

The girl, Dorothy Altman, of Edna No. 1, takes care of the school house. She was hurt slightly when attacked by two girls, daughters of striking miners. Her father is employed as a boiler fireman in the Carr mine and would not quit his job when urged by pickets to do so. George Shetler, of Greensburg, the injured miner, was hit on the head with a brick. His condition is serious.

Of the 30 persons arrested, police said only two were citizens. They are to be given hearings this afternoon.

QUIZ CALLS PINCHOT FOES

By E. W. PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 18.—Stimulated by the tentative promise of Gov. Pinchot to attend Monday's hearing of the Earnest utilities probe committee, members of the Senate inquiring group today began planning an extended investigation that may surprise its severest critics.

As its first step today the committee announced it had agreed to summon for questioning James S. Benn, Pinchot's foe on the Public Service Commission, along with Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Mayor Mackey, of Philadelphia; Amos Ballard, Coleman Joyce and other Philadelphia Rapid Transit officials.

BENN ASSAILED

Decision to issue the subpenas for the group followed statements made by Senator Woodward, Philadelphia, a member of the investigating board, who charged Benn with unethical conduct for a commissioner. The charges involved a bill four years ago permitting the Philadelphia Transit Company to condemn underlying companies.

Woodward also told of a conference of city officials in the office of Gen. Atterbury at which Commissioner Benn was reported to have been present. Although admitting he did not know for certain that Benn was present, he said there seemed to have been little doubt about it.

Gov. Pinchot addressed a radio audience last night through a local station criticizing the utilities, the Public Service Commission and the lobbyists of the utilities "camping on the trails of House and Senate members."

PLAYS LOBBY 'ARMY'

He said:

"Not so many years ago it was discovered that when owners of a utility company were allowed to charge what they pleased the result was disastrous to the public's pocketbook.

"Hence legislatures everywhere created what are known as public service commissions, the members of which are presumed to be the people's watchdogs.

TERMS BOARD FAITHLESS

"To ascertain the rate which should be charged, the Public Service Commission is authorized to make a complete investigation. And that is where Pennsylvania's commission has been faithless to its trust. It has not protected the rights of the people, but has gone over to the other side and is serving the very companies it is supposed to regulate.

"I do not believe the utilities want any kind of inquiry. Friends of the utilities are in a fair way to discover that they erred when in a moment of thoughtlessness they suggested an investigation of the utilities and the Public Service Commission."

J. & L. OFFICIAL KILLS SELF

Clinton S. Bradley, general sales manager of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, shot himself and died in his home, 222 Carnegie place, this morning, according to a report to the coroner.

Mrs. Genevieve W. Bradley, the victim's wife, found the body slumped against the bath tub and thought he had suffered a stroke. She reported said. After moving him she found the revolver.

ENDS HIS LIFE BY SHOOTING

Paul Wandel, 59, of 6735 Frankstown avenue, service employe of Schenley apartments, died in Pittsburgh Hospital today of a bullet wound in the head—self-inflicted, according to a coroner's report.

Mr. Wandel, it was said, had suffered head injuries in an automobile accident from which he had not recovered.

He left for the apartments as usual today, his family said, but returned with a revolver, according to police, and after he locked himself in his room a shot was heard.

Members of the family called police. The revolver and a bottle that had contained poison were found beside him. It was first reported to police that Wandel was superintendent of the hotel.

ent fiscal year, due in part to the measures adopted to relieve unemployment, such as the public buildings bills, and he expressed the opinion that the soldiers' loan bill may require the finding of a billion dollars to finance it. He said:

"I have supported and the nation has maintained the important principle that when men have been called into jeopardy of their lives, in protection of the nation, that the nation as a whole incurs a special obligation beyond that to any other group of its citizens.

"These obligations cannot be wholly met with dollars and cents. But good faith and gratitude require that protection be given to them when in ill health, distress or in need. Over 700,000 World War veterans and their dependents are today receiving monthly allowances for these reasons.

"The country should not be called upon, however, either directly or indirectly, to support or make loans to those who can, by their own efforts, support themselves."

PRODIGY TO AID NEW LABOR BILL

HARRISBURG, Feb. 18.—Baby Rose Marie, 8-year-old musical prodigy and radio entertainer, of McKees Rocks, will give a happy few minutes to members of the committee that receives Representative Michael Angelo Musmanno's newest bill.

The Stowe Township legislator put in a bill to amend the child labor law to permit children to appear on radio programs, on the stage and caddy at golf clubs. The present law prohibits such work by children under 14.

When the bill is discussed in committee, Rose Marie will be brought to Harrisburg to show the tired legislators what a talented child can do to make the world happier.

Middies Win Point For Reinstatemen

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—(INS.)—Lawrence L. Myatt, Quincy, Mass., and Miller S. Burgin, Jacksonville, Fla., today had won the first of three rounds of their fight for reinstatement to the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., from which they were expelled last summer for smuggling two Washington girls into the academy's mess hall.

The Senate passed a resolution authorizing their reinstatement to the class graduating in 1934, but it must be passed by the House and signed by President Hoover before it becomes effective.

IRENE'S LETTER DENIES KILLING

Moore accidentally shot Brady Paul. Why doesn't he speak?"

Dague's letter:

"If this was my last minute to speak, this is what I would say. I have done many things that was wrong and for these things I am willing to take my punishment. But I have never taken human life. Neither has Irene. Neither of us ever fired the shot which killed Brady Paul. This shot was accidentally fired by Ernest Moore. Some day Mr. Moore will tell the truth.

DAGUE'S DENIAL

"We were convicted mainly on the testimony of a ballistician who, I understand, is now a fugitive from justice. I told where we had pawned our .38-caliber gun in Forth Worth, Tex. Irene's .32-caliber gun first in Tulsa, Okla.; my own .38-caliber gun in Forth Worth, Tex. We had no money to send for these guns. Irene was convicted also upon the assumption that she carried a .38-caliber gun. Examination of her pocketbook, which was left in the Chevrolet car and in which are the marks of her gun will prove it was not a .38-caliber.

"All we ask is justice. We know if we get justice we will never be executed. We have never taken human life."

Warning Issued Against Bogus News Camera Men

Complaints are being received that persons posing as Sun-Telegraph photographers are taking orders for pictures [illegible] homes.

The Sun-Telegraph does not engage in commercial photography, does not take orders for photographs and does not admit "proof of purchase." Neither does the Sun-Telegraph advance money to [illegible] any picture in its columns.

At the same time, The Associated Press has issued the following warning:

"Word comes of embarrassment and annoyance inflicted by impostors and petty grafters, who, in many cities, by posing as Associated Press representatives, have victimized merchants and others.

"The Associated Press does not issue badges or printed credentials to its representatives. Its employes do not ask advances of monies or credit at hotels. They do not ask banks to cash checks without complete identification; they do not solicit the purchase of any article or endeavor to sell anything."

Coolidge Sees More Harm Than Aid in Vet Payment

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 18.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The nervous exhaustion of the Congress always becomes apparent near the end of a short session. It is felt that something or perhaps many things must be done to establish a political record.

If the country itself is in an uncertain condition, business distracted, people suffering reverses, these are reflected in the official attitude at Washington.

Calvin Coolidge

At the same time that the House of Representatives is besought to abolish such an abuse as it conceives to be revealed by a committee expenditure of 50 cents for a corkscrew, it passes by a tremendous majority a bill to pay to the veterans a sum estimated from half a billion to a billion dollars.

No one questions the national duty to help distressed veterans. But this bill gives them access to the treasury without regard to their distress. The business reaction which it will cause is likely to harm more veterans than are helped. The country will have to make the best it can of the outcome, which is now uncertain. It is part of the war. The cost of that conflict will go on for generations.

Dancer's Mysterious Death Baffles Police

STRANGLED WITH SILK SCARF

Whether Slaying or Suicide Not Determined; Letters From Admirers Checked

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—Authorities today were investigating the authors of several admiring letters found in the apartment of Miss Lillian Anderson, 24-year-old dancer, who was found strangled with a silken scarf at her home last night.

Coroner's physicians were undecided whether the comely divorcee had been slain or had taken her own life.

The body, clothed in a blanket, was found in the doorway of the woman's apartment bathroom. Water was pouring from faucets in the bathtub.

Police believe she died Saturday, the day on which she was last seen.

Although strangulation caused the dancer's death, spots were found on the tongue which indicated that she might have taken poison.

Letters believed to be from admirers were under close investigation today as a coroner's jury began deliberations.

Miss Anderson, divorced five years ago from Henry McGreen, whose present location is unknown, was the mother of a 7-year-old son who lived with her mother, Mrs. Rogna Jahnke.

Evidently Miss Anderson had been about to bathe. Her handbag was found floating in the bathtub. Since it contained no money, robbery and murder was the opinion of a few police officials.

CHARGES GAG RULE IN CHURCH

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Free speech in the church is a "myth," the Rev. Eliot White charged today after announcement was made of acceptance of his resignation as a member of the staff of Grace Church.

White's resignation followed his advocacy of companionate marriage during the battle waged between Bishop Manning and Judge Ben Lindsey. A statement from the Rev. Dr. W. Russell Bowie, rector of Grace Church, said the name of his parish could not be linked with the idea of companionate marriage.

DEMAND DISREGARDED

At the same time the bishop's office indicated Mr. White's demand that the bishop prefer charges against him in connection with his indorsement of Judge Lindsey's ideas will be "disregarded." In this way Bishop Manning's secretary said the matter will be dropped.

Dr. Bowie, in a letter to Mr. White, pointed out the acceptance was due to the publicity attending the latter's demand that Bishop Manning grant him a trial on charges of "grave immorality."

OFFERED RESIGNATION

Mr. White had offered his resignation more than a month ago rather than withdraw, as his church requested, as a speaker before the Birth Control League. In his letter of resignation he offered the church the alternative of his remaining on the staff with complete freedom to utter his personal opinions.

He spoke as scheduled before the Birth Control League on January 15, but nothing was done about his resignation. Mr. White said he felt the church thus had accepted the alternative he offered.

ASKS LENIENCY FOR YOUTHS

Individual consideration of the offender rather than the offense is the decided trend today in the treatment of criminals and especially in youths up to 21 years, Judge Charles W. Hoffman, of Cincinnati, today declared before members of a Pittsburgh Federation of Social Agencies luncheon in the William Penn Hotel.

Judge Hoffman, a leading authority on juvenile delinquency, was brought here by the federation in its efforts to gain support for the state bill raising the Juvenile Court ages from 16 to 18 years. President N. W. Acheson presided.

Stressing the importance of individual study for the law offender, Judge Hoffman asserted:

"Any plan or organization that provides facilities for the study of the individual cannot be otherwise than beneficial to the community and conducive to its safety and welfare. If the processes of the Juvenile Court are sound in reference to children of the age of 16 years and under, they are equally applicable to the treatment of individuals up to the age of 21 years."

Judge Hoffman was to meet the local committee of Pennsylvania Committee on Penal Affairs this afternoon in a conference on legislation.

PLAN 10-STORY APARTMENT

Architects' plans and drawings were completed today for a proposed 10-story apartment building to be erected by Samuel Gilman, builder and owner, at Beacon and Murdock streets, Fourteenth Ward.

According to Gilman, the building will contain 180 individual apartments of five, six and seven rooms each. Present plans call for a patio garden, playground and basement garage. The plans were drawn by Rubin & VeShancey, downtown architects.

Cost of construction, Gilman said today, would be approximately $1,800,000. The building would occupy a lot fronting 293 feet on Beacon street and extending back 346 feet along Murdock street.

The builder expects to begin construction in June.

'NUMBER'S' MEN SCAN N. Y. CURB

Investigation of the figure, published officially yesterday for the first time in nearly a month, is proceeding. To meet the necessities of the "numbers" men the figures must vary widely; must be necessary to business, so they cannot be banned; must be carefully checked at the source to reduce possibility of tampering, and must be available the same day the books close.

Curb officials statement that the total daily sale of shares is so small that they find it inadvisable to publish it in round figures indicates publication will continue peramently.

Magistrate Leo Rothenberg held two alleged "number" operators for court in $2,500 bail in Center Avenue Police Court today.

The men, Ben Serbin, 22, of 825 Bedford avenue, and Meyer Schwartz, 24, of 39 Perry street, were arrested in a raid at 820 Wylie avenue, described by Plainclothesmen Ray Miller and Harry Neff as "the big Hill lottery office."

Thousands of "numbers" books, adding machines, several pairs of 10-sided dice, and a ledger which showed average daily collections amounting to $1,100, were confiscated and offered in evidence.

ORDER 'HYMIE' EXTRADITED

BULLETIN.

Judge Statfeld refused Hymie Martin's application for freedom on a writ of habeas corpus late today and ordered him into the custody of Cleveland police, who will return him to Ohio.

Queen Esther Morgan, attractive 17-year-old Cleveland high school girl, stood up under a gruelling cross-examination in Common Pleas Court today in the habeas corpus hearing of Hymie Martin, accused in a Cleveland killing, and then collapsed as she was leaving the courtroom.

She stumbled, weeping, into the arms of Detective Frank Dodson, who caught her as she was about to fall to the floor.

Miss Morgan had testified that she saw "Hymie"—who is charged with the murder of William E. Potter, ex-councilman of Cleveland—enter the Cleveland apartment in which the killing occurred either on the day of the murder or the day before.

On cross-examination, Hymie's counsel, Samuel S. Rosenberg, who is trying to free his client on a writ of habeas corpus, failed to shake her story.

Rosenberg today produced two alibi witnesses for Martin—Lou Frischman, 27, clothes merchant, and Bernard Schaechter, a salesman. Both testified Hymie was in the Frischman store at 1337 Fifth avenue, February 3, the day Potter was slain in Cleveland.

Didn't Die Natural Death, 'Spirit' of Valentino Tells Medium

In yesterday's instalment of this absorbing narrative the author described the arrangements for a seance with George Wehner, medium, through which a series of 12 questions were to be submitted to Rudolph Valentino. With the author, Ruth Roland, the screen actress, a stenographer, and others present in a large studio, the medium went into a trance. The author told how the voice of Valentino's mother spoke through the medium, saying that her son's spirit would be pleased to communicate with them. The narrative now continues:

By R. T. M. SCOTT,

Chairman New York Section, American Society for Psychical Research

George Wehner, the medium, wriggled in his chair. He stretched his arms and legs. His face twitched and showed signs of strong emotion. After quite a long pause some repose came to the dramatic figure. In the great photographic studio the alleged spirit of Valentino was speaking to the world again. The sitters straightened a little in their chairs and the pencil of the stenographer flew over the pages of her notebook.

VALENTINO (To Ruth Roland): I am glad to see you. Do you remember me?

RUTH ROLAND: Very well.

VALENTINO: Let me hear your voice again.

RUTH ROLAND: What do you want me to say, Rudolph?

VALENTINO: Just that I wanted to hear your voice. I am very glad to be here and able to talk to you. Strange, isn't it?

RUTH ROLAND: Very strange.

VALENTINO: Sad, too, in a way. It is sad.

RUTH ROLAND: Very sad.

VALENTINO (To the writer): You have questions?

THE WRITER: Yes. Will you answer some questions for us?

VALENTINO: Very well. You shall give them.

With sudden violence the medium tore his vest open and pulled awkwardly at his collar and tie as if needing more air. He slumped back in his chair with eyes closed and head hanging forward and down. Slowly I began to read certain questions which had been sent in by readers.

QUESTION: Does a person on this earth need to be psychic in order to communicate with a person who has died and does such a communication have to pass through a medium?

Valentino

VALENTINO: I would say that anyone in the earth

MARY PICKFORD ON AIR TONIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 18.—(Universal)—With the world listening in, two of the best known women in the film world will talk about old times in the movies at 8:30 tonight.

Mary Pickford, internationally famous film star, and Louella O. Parsons, motion picture editor of Universal Service, will chat about the movies while Columbia Broadcasting System picks up their words and spreads them worldwide.

Memories of both the participants go back to the time when Miss Pickford was the "Biograph Girl," with nobody thinking that the name of a film player was important enough to make public. The talk will touch on many happenings in the movies old and new, and will be one of the outstanding broadcasts of the radio interviews for which Miss Parsons recently signed a contract.

POSTMASTER GENERAL BROWN, urging private air mail carriers to do better with higher speed and lower charges, reveals the interesting fact that "the military branches of the government are not at all enthusiastic about any part that civil aeronautics might play in any preparedness program." Mr. Brown says the "military branches" speak of civil aeronautics "with some contempt."

THE MORE intelligent men in the Army and Navy are not so foolish, of course. They procure all their planes from civil manufacturers, the government being too dull to manufacture on its own account, and the champion flier of the country at present, Capt. Hawks, establishing new records does so as a civilian, backed by a civilian oil company.

If war came this government would depend entirely on civilian manufacturers.

AIMLESS SPECULATION and fruitless effort often lead to scientific accomplishment. Chemistry is the successor of ancient alchemy, seeking to change inferior metals to gold. And now the old divining rod, with credulity as its only asset, may be replaced by a "rod" that really locates what you seek.

A NEEDLE, called the Hotchkiss super dip, described before the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, takes advantage of the fact that certain deposits disturb the earth's normal magnetic lines. In the hands of a prospector knowing geology, that new divining rod is expected to reveal deposits of gold and other precious substances. You are not advised to invest in any such conveyance just yet, but you might speculate on this: What would be the effect on the world's gold standard nations if it became suddenly possible to multiply the gold supply by 10 or 1,000, at little cost?

Alice Revives 1906 Styles At Silver Wedding Fete

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—(AP.)—Daring as always, Alice Roosevelt Longworth turned back the clock a quarter century last night to appear at her silver wedding party in the bulging pompadour of 1906 and a costume from her honeymoon.

The slender, youthful looking "Princess Alice" reunited of the guests invited to dinner at the Longworth home "as they looked" when they had no ball gowns they were commanded to appear in shirtwaists, skirts and sailor hats, so that inside the home everything recalled the February 17 when, at the White House, President Roosevelt gave away his daughter to young Nick, who now shines as the nationally perfect Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Alice did not appear in her wedding gown and veil, substituting a gown of gold satin. The pompadour was topped with a diamond tiara of the same period. She also wore gowns of the same era. More than $450,000 of city funds for improvements are contained in the 1931 budget. Added to this is $200,000 granted by the Pittsburgh Railways Company for repaving. Repaving projects already authorized, amount to $267,000.

"AMERICAN DRUG STORE, ENGLISH SPOKEN"

EVERYTHING FRENCH . . . la, la! How we love it!

The plainest little four-franc cotton handkerchief . . . the merest tin trinket of a pin or bracelet from the rue de Rivoli . . . a post-card even, with a blue stamp . . . how glamorous it is — bought in Paris! It couldn't be more thrilling if it came from Paradise!

But did you ever buy anything in a French drug store? Did you ever find yourself suddenly out of tooth-paste or complexion soap? Did you ever wonder if there was any place in the whole of Paris to buy your own brand of liquid nail polish or astringent?

Then you know the sheer excitement of discovering the little sign "American Drug Store." You know the almost homesick thrill of seeing familiar face powder boxes and talcum tins, and even a counter card displaying the same girl's head that advertises some favorite product at home!

It is significant that these American toiletries for which we gladly pay two prices in Europe are nearly always the well-known, well-advertised brands at home. And no matter where we buy them, the quality of the goods, the quantity, the uniformity, are precisely the same.

By studying the advertisements . . . by asking for things by the brand name . . . we seldom fail to get our money's worth on any side of the wide world!

ODOR OF MASH LEADS TO RAID

A wildcat brewery was uncovered by prohibition agents, they reported, in a raid at 4104 Liberty avenue yesterday. Twenty-three barrels and eight half-barrels of beer and 19 300-gallon vats of beer mash were destroyed. Nobody was found in the structure, one-story brick, when the raiders, detecting an odor of the mash, broke in.

An automobile containing 30 gallons of moonshine was seized by the agents at Brown and Wolfendale streets last night. The driver escaped.

Joseph Len, 50, was lodged in the county jail, and P. Zelemenka, 38, was released on his own recognizance following the confiscation of a 50-gallon still in a dwelling at 6 Conklin street, according to the agents.

HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM IN REVIEW; LOCAL AMUSEMENT NOTES

Africa Starts Two Girls On Way to Success In Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 18.

Africa has not only furnished backgrounds for several pictures but has served as the starting point for two girls who might never have received a second glance at a casting office.

First was Edwina Booth, who as an extra was taken into the jungles with the "Trader Horn" company, where her acting ability was discovered.

And now Ruth Weston, [illegible] New York [illegible] contract [illegible] R. K. O. She has been [illegible] assignments [illegible] ingenue [illegible] "Mme. [illegible] and films [illegible] in far off Africa [illegible] gave her the [illegible] portunity.

Meeting the Trader Horn company at Nairobi, they had their film developed. After the print members of the company declared that Miss Weston possessed screen ability. Upon her return to New York she got the R. K. O. contract.

Featured in Miss Weston's first picture will be Lily Damita and O. P. Heggie. Victor Schertzinger is directing.

Joseph Jackson tells [illegible] about a publicity man who was engaged in a feud with a [illegible] tor. The battle had been on for months. One day the agent showed up on the set with a party of important visitors. Richard Barthelmess had left the place and the P. A. approached the director to find if he would return.

"No," replied the director, but he added hearingly, "tell them I'm the director."

Later he chuckled, the P. A. but they wouldn't believe it."

Experiment

The tears that I shed were incongruous drops,
And I cried for exclusively you.
But a heart that is heavy infrequently stops,
And as moments kept passing, I grew
Too hardened to care for emotional things;
Too bitter for love and the rest.
And suddenly, sharply, the telephone rings
And I hear your endearments, you pest!
Your greeting is charged with apologies, and
And your sentiments drip as of old;
I want no caresses at all at your hand,
For you leave me distressingly cold.
I'm sure that you'll get nothing by it,
But hurry, my dear, and we'll try it!

Nutty

Outsmarting Them

Willie Bergen Morgan [illegible] the Palace. "Eadie Was a Lady" [illegible] "Body and Soul" from the Three's a Crowd revue. The management of the revue, however, objected on the ground that it's a protected ditty, and their attorneys pointed out to Helen that it is against the law for anyone not in their production to sing "Body and Soul" on a stage. So what happened?

Helen continued singing it by sitting on the steps leading from the stage to the audience!

Philanthropy

Joe Lewis, the Roman Pools master of ceremonies, wishes this department to announce for him that on next Saturday night the proceeds of his performance will be taken to the bank!

Incidentally

Then there's the incident that took place Over There between Charles Munn and an Earl. A quarrel of some sort in which Munn bested the Englishman via the wit route. Bateman, the famous caricaturist, heard of it and drew it for Punch.

The next time Munn encountered the Earl he showed him the devastating cartoon. The Earl dropped dead from the shock.

The successor to the title still is so grateful to Munn he sends him a costly gift every Christmas.

I'm In Tears!

"Dear Walter," passionately day-letters Walter Wanger of Paramount Films, "your recent paragraph about Tallulah Bankhead being a temperamental star already is not quite true. In fact, she is a regular guy who has cooperated with the company, notwithstanding rumors that she was impossible to handle. Why, the stage hands and others just threw her a swell birthday party because she is so nice, claiming she is the most popular artist who ever worked in the plant.

"Her one ambition is to make a success of her first picture, and it isn't easy, you know, to step into a lead in a talkie without ever having made a picture before. So when she met Mr. Zukor she told him how nervous she was and asked him to leave the set as it would make her feel better. We think this is a swell attitude, so why not give the little girl a break? I think it is up to us Cads to straighten this thing out—what do you think Walter? Best regards as always."

Is my mouth open???

Stew Stuff

Overheard in a Forty-eighth Street asylum by R. H. Rahilly:

"Come 'long. Less have sumpn'er."

"No. Less go hom while we're hone."

Similies

Suggested for Frank J. Wilstach's Simile Dictionary: R. T. Erickson's "A" full of similes as the Wilstach Dictionary, and thin and loud like a dollar watch being wound. The simile on the bottle of Scotch whisky: Smooth as a kitten's wrist.

The Squelch Suvelegant

It happened in Britain several years after a yacht tilt between America and England. At least one of the Roosevelts was telling it to a group the other night.

As per custom, after the yacht race, which the British won, there was a dinner. One of the Yankees was restless during the windy talking, so he started to smoke a cigar. He was crushed by the Commodore, who stiffly chirped:

"Sir, we never smoke until the King has been toasted!"

"I beg pardon," replied the American. "When I saw you take a small white object from that gold box I thought it was a cigarette."

"But it wasn't," rebuked the Commodore. "That was a toothpick!"

"Oh, I see," snapped Our Hero. "It isn't all right to smoke before the King is toasted, but it is quite okay to pick your teeth!"

Deustchland uber Alles!

Observation

In the west 80s, where motor vehicles race to the tempo of 30 miles an hour or more, there is an old sign which reads: "School Zone — Walk Your Horses!"

Here's Luck!

A well-dressed young man presented himself at one of the municipal lodging houses, broke, the other eve, saying he was a crooner of mountain songs and expected to make a phonograph record shortly. Meanwhile, he asked to be staked.

The order for the record came through promptly. He made the record and company executives were so enthusiastic they asked him for another to back it up. He had no material, but promised to write a song overnight. He paid off the lodging house that night and next morning went up to the recording studio and sang the song he had written.

Then name of it is "The Bread Line Blues," and advance critical opinion says it will go like one-way traffic.

Comedienne

Marion Davies, charming comedienne of the screen, has the starring role in "The Batchelor Father," film coming Friday to the Aldine.

Harris, With Films Only, to Cut Prices

In connection with the straight picture policy which goes into effect in the Harris Saturday, matinee prices will be reduced. Prices for matinees will be from 10 to 25 cents and evenings from 15 to 45 cents.

"The Criminal Code" will be on view in the Harris following the run there next week of "The Costello Case."

NEW SHOWS COMING TO STAGES MONDAY

George Alison and his wife Gertrude Rivers Alison both will appear in support of Maude Kennedy in the comedy "Michael and Mary," which comes to the Alvin next week. Alison is a well known stage name. Every success produced in the Lyceum Theater in New York during the earlier years of its memorable regime under the Frohman management contained the name of Alison, either George or Gertrude, and many of the greatest triumphs of the Empire Theater in years since have had the Alison name imprinted on their programs.

Next Monday evening, "Making Mary," the new musical comedy which Gordon-Lennox are producing, will have its world premiere in the Nixon. Seats are now on sale.

Artists, writers, newspaper men and actors are characters in "Up Pops the Devil," the play announced by George Sharp for next week. The locale is Greenwich Village, New York.

George Jaffee, manager of the Academy announces that following the closing of "Let's Go" on Saturday night, his own stock burlesque company will open for the remainder of the season. Jaffe has secured well known burlesque stars to head his company.

LAURA LA PLANTE HEROINE WITH FAY

God's Gift to Women" is the title of Frank Fay's starring picture, now in the full tide of production at studios in California. It was formerly known as "The Devil Was Sick" and is based upon a play by Jane Hinton Gates. Michael Curtiz is directing the production.

Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

Pain Stops Instantly!

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

CHAPTER XVII.

Where does a dope addict get the dope which is driving him or her through the tortures of hell itself?

I can buy dope in 20 or 25 different places in New York City and never get out of the sound of the rumbling elevated or beyond easy walking distance of a subway station.

I can buy of doctors and I can buy it of nurses, and I can buy it of crooked druggists very few of these I admit, but there are one or two of them just the same.

I can buy dope of waiters in smart restaurants and I can buy dope of poor shuffling waitresses in cheap hash houses.

I can buy dope from a bell boy in the smart hotels uptown and I can buy dope from the janitor of a smart apartment near Riverside drive.

I can buy dope from a doorman at a smart hat shop in the upper fifties and I can buy dope from a deckhand on a ferryboat.

I can buy dope from a steward on a luxurious liner and I can step behind a house and buy dope from a stevedore on the wharf.

I can buy dope of a porter on a Pullman car and I can buy it in the back streets of a dozen different country towns.

I can buy dope in Chicago and in Seattle and in San Francisco and in Los Angeles. I can buy it in any of these cities from certain taxicab drivers and from certain newsboys.

They're bootlegging morphine all over the United States and Canada.

They make it up in cubes with some other powdery drug and the dope users pay bootleggers' prices and get bootleggers' wares.

Miss Rubens

Drug Addicts

Marihuana is the most terrible drug of all. It is the murder drug. You can buy a box of marihuana cigarets in any city of any size in the United States.

Smoke three or four of these cigarets and you will go out and do your best to commit murder. The murder drug they call marihuana.

It is mostly used by Mexicans, but they do pass marihuana cigarets around at wild parties, and half the wild stories you hear about these wild parties come from marihuana fiends.

Society women, writers, actresses, shop girls—they are all held together in a sisterhood of misery by their bondage to this terrible slavery of drugs.

Some of the victims are led into the dope habit by the example of others, some are tricked into it by agents of the dope ring, who give them what they call a dare and urge them to try anything once.

But when they try it once, poor fools, they try it again, and before they know what they are doing they are caught in the net which nine times out of ten they can never escape, except by death.

But from my experience I have no hesitation in saying that a large proportion of the pitiful drug slaves I have known in high places, and in low, have been made dope fiends by the carelessness of pre-occupied and over-hurried doctors in good and regular standing or by the deliberate cruelty of an unworthy member of a noble profession who will do anything for money.

My first shot of morphine, administered to ease my suffering, was given me by Dr. A., now one of the leading gynecologists in the country.

Later, when my husband learned the exact nature of the treatment, he called in another great physician, Dr. B., who said it would be a crime to operate on a girl of my tender age—for this particular ailment—and conceded that his contemporary's treatment was a most proper one.

Of course, the actual continuance of the use of morphine was the fault of myself and myself alone. I realized it eventually might lead me to becoming an addict, but I thought myself strong enough to quit it before it got a hold on me.

It is so easy to convince one's self that this one last time won't make any difference."

Promised Mate

More and more frequently I felt the urge to calm myself and ease my pain with the soothing hypodermic needle and the few drops of white liquid that brought such relief.

My husband had kept remonstrating with me until, eventually, I became so tired of his nagging that I promised to quit using the morphine. For a long time I relieved my suffering with secret injections.

Oftener and oftener it became necessary for me to resort to the treatment. The terrible pain gnawed at me daily, hourly, unless I alleviated my suffering with a "shot."

Then, for the first time (this was about a year and a half after Dr. A had given me my first injections) I realized that I was a dope addict, a term which has always and still does—strike terror into my soul!

Alma Rubens was a dope fiend.

A weak, worldly girl, who hadn't sufficient will power to cast aside the treacherous needle and the insidious liquid, responsible for my loathsome yearning.

No one knows how ashamed I was. No one will ever believe me when I say that I spent hours, days, weeks during that period on my knees, praying, imploring God to save me, to give me strength to break away, and that failing to let me die!

I had no friends ear to listen to my troubles. I couldn't tell my husband because our relations were at the breaking point.

And I couldn't tell my mother, because she wouldn't have understood.

So in my dilemma, after months and months of this, I decided to return to California.

Upon my arrival there I added to my woes by falling hopelessly in love with Ricardo Cortez. Poor old Alma. What troubles!

(Copyright 1931, Daily Mirror Inc.)

'HOPELESSLY IN LOVE'

"I ADDED TO MY WOES . . . FELL IN LOVE WITH CORTEZ"

War Vet, Father of 11, Dies at 109

DENVER, Feb. 18 (AP).—John Harrington, who celebrated his 109th birthday last Saturday, is dead. He lived an active and varied career. Born in Ireland in 1822, he served for several years in the British army, and saw service in the Crimean War. He was the father of eleven children and was married three times.

Real Estate

The North Boroughs Building and Loan Association re-elected the following directors at a recent meeting: W. C. Anderson, A. W. Glinn, W. W. Espy and Paul Richards. The other directors whose terms have not yet expired are P. E. Zimmerman, L. J. Riegler, S. G. Patterson, F. F. Miller, Urban E. Dice and Otto F. Mayer. The officers of the association are: A. R. Robinson, president; W. C. Anderson, vice president; William Hare, treasurer; A. W. Glinn, secretary, and John E. Winner, solicitor.

John P. Enner has sold to the Linde Air Products Company a property measuring 86x170 feet in Heisel street, Homestead, for a consideration of $10,000.

A brick home in Lewell street, Twelfth Ward, has been sold by John Minella to Henzey for $8,000. The house is built on a lot 26x100 feet.

Declaring much of the present development work in Pittsburgh and elsewhere is wasteful, A. S. Keller, industrial manager of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, addressing the noon-day meeting of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board in the William Penn Hotel yesterday, pronounced an immediate need of co-ordination of effort by organizations and agencies in order to promote Pittsburgh industrially. Pointing out that the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce had undertaken an expansive program of industrial development under the leadership of men concerned about the city's future Keller said, "The first essential of an industrial development program is proper and sufficient organization and attention is being directed toward that end."

During the past three years the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board has made appraisals on properties exceeding in volume $40,000,000.

AT LAST! The great Belasco stage hit has come to the talkies!

For months Broadway chuckled and thrilled at Belasco's most unusual play. It has been made into a thoroughly delightful screen play with Marion Davies doing her stuff with an expertness that makes most other screen comediennes pale by comparison. She's a scream. The picture's a riot. You'll have the time of your life!

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

How to eat our cake and have it too is the problem facing us tonight. Ambrosia indeed when the radio gods serve listeners with 10 big stars in one evening and also give us the opportunity of seeing three of them in person. Billie Jones and Ernie Hare are in the city with "Chick" Kennedy for a 6 o'clock broadcast on WCAE and performances tonight and tomorrow night at Carnegie Music Hall. Our eyes dilate as we read the list of other imposing personalities scheduled tonight: Will Rogers, Mary Pickford, Fritzi Scheff, Florence Easton, Frances Alda, Tandy Mackenzie and "Little Bill" Johnson, the tennis Titan. How to see Jones and Hare in Oakland and listen to the other stars is our problem.

Mary Pickford

Four automobiles and a police escort met Jones and Hare, Mary Fox Raines, The Enchanters and a bevy of NBC beauties at Pennsylvania Station this morning and motored them to the City-County Building, where they met Mayor Kline and other officials.

* * *

* * *

QUESTION A DAY:

Who is "Nemo" at KDKA? I heard his or her name mentioned three or four times in a recent visit. W. F. E., Overbrook.

* * *

Answer—"Nemo" is not a person. It is a term used freely by engineers, announcers to designate a program originating outside the studios. "Nemo" in Latin means "no name." It was first applied to radio when "wire facilities from remote control" was found to be too long an expression. G. E. Stewart, a WEAF engineer, coined the term.

We heard Irene Jones and Adah Straub (20 Fingers, KDKA tonight at 7:15) rehearse "Lady, Play Your Mandolin" yesterday. It's a knockout arrangement with Adah playing the melody and Irene filling in with variations from "Peanut Vendor," "La Paloma," "Song of India," a bit of Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Scheherazade" and Cui's "Orientale."

* * *

These compositions are so near alike that we invite you to conduct your own listening test.

* * *

The evening will not be complete if you miss hearing Ed Harvey do "The King's Horses" on KDKA at 9. Don't miss it.

* * *

"Al and Pete" are clicking in their afternoon program from Chicago. One of their jokes yesterday:

Al: "I went to see a spiritualist last night."

Pete: "Was he good?"

Al: "No, just medium."

A-wah!

STUDIO LIGHTS

Ruth Etting is to be heard in a special program from KDKA studios Friday afternoon.

Radio City—the huge entertainment center in New York City—is to be completed in three years, coincident with the use of practical television, Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of NBC, has announced.

In his statement to the press, Mr. Aylesworth said:

"The most successful radio clients have been those who have used newspaper advertising in conjunction with their radio programs. Radio does not and cannot replace the printed word in advertising."

Russia plans to have 60 high power stations, up to 100,000 watts, by 1934, menacing the radio leadership of the United States, O. H. Caldwell, former radio commissioner, told the National Federation of Radio Associations at Indianapolis yesterday.

Many have wondered about that peculiar name "Tandy Mackenzie." It's this way. Tandy was a Scotchman born in Hawaii. He was named "Sandy," but the Hawaiians couldn't pronounce the "S" and it soon became "Tandy"—which has stuck.

WNBO goes right ahead with plans to open up in Pittsburgh. A van of furniture has been packed for their studios in the Hotel Henry and sticking to facts the wallpaper has been ordered.

Tomorrow morning brings Ray Perkins, comedian, on KDKA at 10 and Helen Hayes, stage star, on WJAS at 11. WCAE has the Wireless Military Band from London at 2:45 p. m. tomorrow.

Henry M. Neeley, the "Old Stager," revives memories of bygone radio days in a new series booked for WJZ-KDKA next Monday night at 9 o'clock. He presents first Mary McCoy and Harold Sanford, NBC conductor, who was a close associate of Victor Herbert.

Goldman's Band is to take the place of Walter Damrosch on Saturday night concerts when the celebrated maestro leaves for his annual vacation in Florida this Sunday. Three high school orchestras are to be heard in his stead in the NBC Music Appreciation Hour, Friday, February 27.

We have been asked to announce that Pittsburgh musicians will give a concert for the unemployed April 15 in Syria Mosque. At the same time we compliment local artists on their radio programs last Sunday.

WCAE graciously apologized for NBC's last-minute change in Duke Ellington's schedule last night. Vincent Lopez was substituted. NBC should have borne the burden, not WCAE.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Styles of program presentation now being used by all Pittsburgh newspapers were originated by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Its present style of programs by the hour has been copied by many large newspapers in the United States. The Sun-Telegraph "Tells It First" in everything.

Manless Cabaret Dance Held by Drama Group Of Century Club

Lives there a man with perception so impaired that he still thinks in this advanced day that women can't have a perfectly marvelous time without his brethren? If there is such a one, he should have watched last night from the balcony of the Twentieth Century Club ballroom over a hundred women in the most incredible variety of costumes dancing gaily.

The occasion was a cabaret dinner dance by the members of the drama department held for themselves. In the brilliantly clad throng one could recognize many familiar characters, Amos 'n' Andy, of course, and a most intriguing Simon Legree, and ladies from all the courts of Europe and peasant women, and Spanish maidens, and beaux of another day, and Charlie Chaplin.

* * *

Covers were laid for over 100 in the dining room of the clubhouse, with the tables arranged in the form of a square, covered by massive candelabra holding burning white tapers. After the dinner there was a promenade.

Mrs. William Knox Dunlap was a most colorful Simon Legree. Mrs. John D. Duff and Mrs. Allen Davison as old-fashioned girls wore blue and pink organdie gowns with puff sleeves and sunbonnets to match and they carried violet nosegays. Mrs. C. S. Shoemaker and Mrs. D. W. Kuhn as Breton vendors of fish wore quaint costume and knitted away while waiting for customers for their wares.

Jane Sloan looked like a most dashing Frenchman with a moustache and a shiny high silk hat as the salient points of her costume. With her was Virginia Kuhn as Pierette. Mrs. Richard D. Baker was a young gallant, and Mrs. Edward Klingelhofer, a Spanish girl. Mrs. A. W. Sherrill was a lovely Catherine the Great, chatting with a gypsy. Mrs. Thomas K. Cree, Mrs. H. Fred Mercer was a peasant woman and Mrs. H. K. Holmes a formidable nurse.

* * *

Others I saw in the gay throng were Mrs. Jason S. Paxton as a Japanese art; Mrs. Kirkland W. Todd as a silly young Colonial maid, Mrs. Howard B. Miller as Romeo, Mrs. William A. Dickham as Charlie Chaplin and Mrs. Ralph Rowles as an Indian maid.

Miss Edith G. Cole was a charming Dresden shepherdess and Mrs. William D. Hamilton was Marie Antoinette. Mrs. Howard S. Evans in a brilliantly-colored Argentine costume was there with her daughter, Louise, as a colorful dancer.

Another mother and daughter in companion costumes were Mrs. E. B. Goehring and Mrs. H. M. Rinehart as Raggedy Andy and Raggedy Ann.

In costume of the gay 90s were Mrs. T. I. Painter, Mrs. Pitt O. Heasley and Mrs. Albert E. Duckham. Mrs. John E. Nelson looked like Queen Elizabeth.

Mrs. H. Allen Marchesney, who was the chairman of the way affair, represented a star. I believe wearing a costume of silver cloth and a silver crown, and she carried a large lighted taper. Mrs. Charles West came as a gypsy and I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Carroll Miller and of Mrs. Stephen Stone. Mrs. William Maclay Hall was a haughty spanish senora with a black mantilla and Mrs. Burt Gellatly was a Turk in cloth of gold and a fez.

Mrs. John A. Byerly was a charming little girl in blue wearing a beruffled Alice blue frock. Mrs. T. Clifton Jenkins wore the ever popular gypsy costume too.

* * *

Very elaborate indeed was the ceremony that marked the wedding of Mary Frances Palmer, daughter of the George O. Palmers of Miami, Fla., and Frederick G. Bannerot, Jr., son of the Frederick G. Bannerots, of the Schenley Apartments which took place last evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Miami Beach Community Church.

The altar was decked with hanging laurel white roses, calla lilies and lighted cathedral candles. The aisles were bordered with red roses. The Rev. J. Mitchell Taylor, of Fort Pierce, Fla., officiated, assisted by the Rev. E. A. King, pastor of the church in Miami.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory duchess satin, with a high waistline and long train with motifs of lace worn by her mother. Her tulle and lace veil was finished with a cap caught with orange blossoms. She carried white orchids. The matron of honor, Mrs. Bascom Headen Palmer, aunt of the bride, wore cameo pink satin with a pearl motif and a pink tulle hat. The bridesmaids wore gowns of cameo pink satin with brief trains and bows in the back forming a basque effect, and hats of tulle.

* * *

They all carried festoons of red roses, sweet peas and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaids included Sarah Stewart of New York, Katherine Swearingen, of Bartow, Fla., Elizabeth Hardy and Lydia Burwell, of Miami, and the two small flower girls, cousins of the bride, were Nancy and Sally Palmer. They wore dainty frocks of cameo tulle in Kate Greenaway style and carried tulle baskets of rose petals.

Serving as best man was Charles E. Heyward, of New York, and the ushers included George T. Harrington, also of New York; A. G. Cline, III, of Pittsburgh; William H. Knowles, Jr., of Pensacola, Fla., and Dr. Bascom H. Palmer, of Miami.

Among the Pittsburghers at the wedding were the Bannerots, of course, the J. W. Henrys and Frances Henry, the Charles M. Kellys, the junior A. H. Clines, the William Lappes, the C. M. Rudds and Dr. J. H. Williamson.

Immediately after the reception the Bannerots left for New York, from where they will sail on a Mediterranean cruise. The reception was given in the Palmer home, which was filled with southern smilax, lilies and gladiola. After their cruise, en route to Charleston, W. Va., where they will reside, the junior Bannerots will visit the senior Bannerots in the Schenley Apartments, and will be honored with a reception in the Hotel Schenley.

The bride wore a gown of powder blue chiffon with a matching hat and carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Catherine Burkhart, of Zanesville, O., a former classmate of the bride, as the maid of honor wore orchid lace with a matching hat and carried pink roses. Clarence Dittmer, of Brookline, was the best man, and the ushers were Peter McGrath and Earl Stephens.

The wedding breakfast was given in the Cozy Corner tea room, Oakmont, with covers laid for 36 guests. A reception followed in the Wendell home. After a honeymoon in Cleveland, Detroit and New York, Mr. and Mrs. McClory will reside in Brookline.

The LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Not until the wizards of the air waves establish radio communication with Mars will broadcasting receive such world-wide attention as was given to the Pope's microphonic message.

With an audience estimated at the colossal figure of 630,000,000 listeners the Pope's radio debut not only achieved page one in the public prints, but pages two, three, four and, in many cases, five. The press recognized it as broadcasting's greatest triumph and assigned the larger part of its staff to the business of recording it for its readers.

* * *

An unexpected note and, for that reason, unusually thrilling was provided in the casual two-way conversation between New York broadcasters and prelates and officials of the Vatican, which came at the close of the program.

Ceremonial bars were let down and listeners, suddenly become eavesdroppers, heard intimate greetings of high clerics—"I'm right here, Steve!" "Hello, Jack! Glad to hear your voice. Your mother heard every word. Goodby, Jack." The conversation furnished a startling human interest note, easing the tension of the impressive broadcast which preceded it.

* * *

It is hard for the average layman to visualize a man dressed in a cassock, particularly if he be above the rank of a priest, as a humanly interesting fellow called "Jack" or "Steve."

* * *

The success of the papal broadcast—they say it represented an expenditure of $180,000 on the part of American broadcasters—has given a new significance to international radio, has led the networks directly to make room on their schedules for regular services from the Vatican. These will come, our operatives learn, two or three times weekly and will form an imposing addition to the religious programs now on the air.

* * *

It has taken but the short space of two years for international radio to have leaped from an experimental state to that which can successfully project the voices of world figures over thousands of miles of ocean wastes.

The experimental work has been conducted chiefly by C. W. Horn, summoned from the KDKA laboratories by NBC and given a free hand to work out an aerial spanning of the Atlantic.

* * *

This department remembers the hushed expectancy of a little group hurriedly beckoned to the upper reaches of Fifth avenue on a February afternoon in 1929 to hear—could it be possible?—the faint signals of an orchestral concert in London. The test, which Horn proudly declared at that time, was 50 per cent perfect, was regarded as the forerunner of the day when London would call regularly and often and would find us in. And after London, of course, the deluge of continental cities. All knocking at our radio door, all testifying to American radio ingenuity.

Today the radio men seldom preface their announcements of European programs with the words "an attempt will be made to rebroadcast." They are reasonably sure the rebroadcast will be successful. They have thrown "attempt" in the waste basket.

* * *

Marconi has been of great aid to them, particularly as their ambitions extended to efforts to bring the voices of the Pope and Mussolini to American ears. But it is conceivable that eventually they would have succeeded without Marconi. Their enthusiasm and enterprise would eventually, we believe, have communicated themselves to the rulers of church and state, would have impressed them with the startling possibility of addressing over the microphones untold millions of persons throughout the world.

Horn and his colleagues will not rest upon their oars, you may be sure. Even radio contact with the Vatican is just another milestone in their careers of radio pathfinding. They will continue until they have made accessible to listeners, at least in America, every nation in the world, including the State Department willing, Soviet Russia.

"The biggest surprise of all was when she told me that he goes out with lots of other girls. I was stunned, not because I think he should [illegible] but because she still thinks he will change his mind and want to marry her after all.

Amy's life is being spoiled, not by the man's selfishness, but by her own silliness and weakness. If Amy were stronger, if she would refuse to let him waste and cheapen her, then he couldn't hurt her. But she isn't strong enough yet, not wise enough. She'll have to grow her own strength and her own wisdom and nothing you can do will help her.

So give her your love, honey, and then go away and leave her alone with her home-made misery. She'll snap out of it much quicker if you do.

THE LOVE-MENDER

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY

If there WAS a little shop like this, with a little old toy-maker magically able to mend broken Loves, Cupids with their golden wigs off, their toes broken, their stuffing "losing" out, their noses melted away, their wings draggled, it would be crowded with pretty women—and otherwise. Mobbed—he'd be, the little man! His words hung upon, while he went into a seance over some desperately bad-off doll. Thanked tearfully while the mended love, all gilded and painted fresh again, was borne off joyfully. He'd be a popular little old man.

But some there are who are content to let the faded, broken old Love lie quiet with all the other put-up things, once he has lain there long enough. And they can smile when they look at him, too, just as they do over the real old-dolls put away in a doll-bed; while they hug the new Love to a warm breast—and are glad to have him! Old loves aren't always best!

Phil Veritzen's Jealous Attitude Threatens Party Plan

What had happened to displease Philip Veritzen in the short time which had elapsed since I had seen him? This was the question which caromed around my brain as I listened to his astonishing comment that he thought I had decided to dispense with his services altogether.

It was not because of my tardiness in telephoning him. I was sure of that, though he is easily irritated on the score of punctuality. But he has been most indulgent to me upon the late occasions that I have transgressed in that direction. No, this was something more serious, and with a feeling of strong distaste I braced myself to find out what it was.

If only my own comfort had been concerned, if even my position in his organization had been hazarded, I am sure I should have given him a reply as curt as his own and hung up the receiver. But at his own request I had depended upon his munificent offers for Mary's party, and it was too late now to make arrangements of my own that would insure the successful entertainment I wished for her. Besides I had even a greater thing at stake, the reconciliation between Neel and his father which Lillian had insisted had but one chance, the influence with Philip Veritzen which she claimed was mine.

"I am sorry to be so late," I said deferentially, with the assumption that my tardiness was his only grievance. "But really I could not find out definitely before about the time." I devoutly hoped that the recording angel had business away from my record at this moment. "And even now I cannot tell you until later about the colors of the gowns. But I can tell you that the party is scheduled for tonight. You wanted to know that first, on account of the theater tickets, didn't you?"

He was silent for a long second, while I wondered if he would be so crass as to withdraw his offer of theater box seats for Mary's guests.

"It doesn't matter about the tickets," he said at last, brusquely. "I'll attend to them. All you will have to do will be to bring the members of your party to the theater after dinner. The tickets will be all ready for you. Neither does what you call your tardiness matter. But I am curious to know why you should have led me to expect you would wear a bouquet of my selection tonight when you were planning to discard it."

"I do not understand you," I faltered, although I did only too well. Edith Fairfax. I could see her "fine Italian hand" in this wretched business only too plainly.

"I learned of it only by chance," his deep voice went on. "Miss Fairfax telephoned me a little while ago saying that she was going to wear green at the party and that she was telephoning me because she thought she could save me the cost and bother of a separate bouquet. She said that you had decided upon said color and that your 'boy friend,' whoever the gentleman may be, was sending you a bouquet to match. She said she would be 'thrilled to tears' to wear the one I had selected for you because she knew it would be the last word.

I believe that was the expression she used. She is rather a naive, schoolgirlish person apparently and does not repress her enthusiasm. But naturally I do not choose that she, not anyone, shall wear the flowers I selected for you. I have selected another bouquet for her, and if what she says is true and you are wearing another man's flowers, I shall throw away the one I planned for you. May I venture to ask the name of the fortunate man?"

I would not have believed he could be so crass. Philip Veritzen, the greatest dramatic producer of his time, was acting like a loutish country schoolboy and talking like one, only for a wider vocabulary.

But for the moment I was beyond speech of any kind. Fierce anger was shaking me against Philip Veritzen, against Edith Fairfax, above all against my husband. For he must have told Edith that he was sending me a bouquet for my sand-colored gown, must have planned with her the atrocious baiting of Mr. Veritzen of which she had been guilty.

"You are unwilling to tell me?" Mr. Veritzen's voice was still icy, but there was a note of appeal in it, or so I fancied. "You either have been grossly misinformed or have jumped to conclusions." I said when I had battled myself to composure. "I have not yet selected your bouquet for my green gown, and the only other man who has even thought of sending me one is my husband."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Thursday, February 19

This day's sidereal operations point to a rather routine state of affairs with a tendency to plod along in the accustomed grooves with steadiness and conservatism. All that pertains to labor, industry, agriculture and mining should make fair progress and there may be benefits from elderly persons or institutions and also through real or personal property.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a rather routine year, with matters progressing steadily in the accustomed channels. Employment, labor, mining, agriculture and real estate should be fairly satisfactory and there may be benefit in dealing with elderly persons and institutions.

A child born on this day should be steady, industrious and practical and should reach a stable place through its own responsibility and efforts.

Soiled furniture will never rub into a good luster no matter how much energy is expended upon it. First wipe off the article to be polished with a cloth wrung out of warm water and rub well with the grain of the wood. Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Acquainting the Bride's and The Groom's Parents.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a couple have wed without the parents of the contracting parties having ever been acquainted, who should make the first overtures?

I have always thought that the parents of the bridegroom should call on the parents of the bride, but my husband is of the opposite opinion.

MRS. H. K. E.

Quite right you are. But, if your bridegroom's parents do not make this move, and make it very soon, I suggest . . . I'd even like to urge . . . that you plan to have a little dinner at your home very soon, and invite your parents and the bridegroom's parents. As a matter of fact, this can be one of the most charming parties that a bride can give.

For the Courteous Young Man.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I skate a great deal and when I take a girl with me, after we come home, she always thanks me. What should I say?

2. If I ask a girl to go with me for a drive and she turns me down, what reply should I make in that case? FRED.

1. Good for this well-bred friend of yours! I'm sure that you are proud of her for having such good manners. When she tells you what a good time she has had and how appreciative she is of your kindness, you might say, "Thank you, Betty, for going with me. It was such a pleasure to be with you, and I've had a most happy time."

2. There is nothing to do in this unhappy case except perhaps, to say, "All right, Mary," or "I'm sorry you can't go, Mary," or something of this casual kind.

Graduation Invitations.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am about to send my invitations for my high school commencement. How should they be sent?

2. I have been going with a young man for several months. Should I send him an invitation? I have already invited him verbally. UNDECIDED.

1. Usually the high school authorities suggest the time at which the commencement invitations are to be sent. If they do not do this, and if you cannot find out from your class teacher which is the preferred time, I suggest that you mail them between two and three weeks before the date of the commencement.

2. Yes. If you have invited him verbally, you should follow up this verbal invitation with the formal invitation.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Take Advantage of Preventive Medicine.

We have made great progress against disease. This is shown by the cutting in half of the nation's death rate since 1900.

Dr. Copeland

Much of this decrease, of course, has been among infants. It is believed, however, there can be made a further great decrease in the present general death rate. Too many people have not as yet availed themselves of what is called "preventive medicine."

Many diseases of infants, children and adults can and should be prevented. The future of medicine and the future of the nation as a whole, lies, not in the curing of diseases, but in the prevention of diseases.

To a remarkable degree public health can be bought. Unfortunately, there are too many communities that neglect to do the things that prevent disease. There are too many individuals who will not take advantage of their opportunities.

Since the discovery of the toxin-anti-toxin control of diphtheria, the death rate of this disease has been reduced 95 per cent. If all parents would take their children to physicians for injection against this disease, there would be no diphtheria.

With care in the cleanliness in the homes and city streets, with proper supervision of the water and milk supplies, and protection against flies, typhoid fever, at one time a very common disease, is now comparatively rare. There is now available a vaccine that protects against this disease.

Wherever typhoid fever does exist, it may be said to be due to carelessness. This carelessness is either the fault of the individual or of the community. Ignorance in these matters is almost criminal.

We look forward to the day, when preventive medicine and care of the public health will become a national affair. War must be declared on all diseases that can be prevented and which still cripple the nation. It is true that the health of the people of the United States and Canada is far better today than it was in 1900, but there still remains much to be done.

This is a subject which should be taught in the schools, it should be discussed in the home. The press, the pulpit, the radio—these agents for good should be enlisted even more than they now are in spreading health-knowledge.

Answers to Health Queries.

ARTIE. Q.—What do you advise for psoriasis?

A.—First attention must be given the digestion. Constipation is an important factor and, even though the bowels move daily, there may be sluggishness.

MRS. E. L. C. Q.—I am irritable, thin, pale and worn from nursing my husband through a long siege of illness. What can I do to build up my general health?

A.—In order to gain weight and build up your general health I would suggest that you eat nourishing foods and have plenty of sleep and rest.

DIDN'T DIE NATURALLY, VALENTINO 'SPIRIT' SAYS

RUDY 'SORRY' HE MISSED TALKIES

world, who desired to communicate with one who had passed over, would have to be psychic to get a communication. And what was that about a medium?

PART OF QUESTION REPEATED: And does such a communication have to pass through a medium?

VALENTINO: It would not because the person getting the communication would be his own medium. He would be psychic. Psychic means sensitive. Such a person would have to be psychic enough to feel the vibrations.

QUESTION: If you had lived would you have gone into the talkies?

Had Good Voice

VALENTINO: I think I would have because I had a good voice—so people said. I used to sing although I did not have a trained voice for singing. I even made several records.

I think I sang one time something about pale hands—Pale Hands Beside the Shalimar. It wasn't a success but I believe it would have sounded well in the talkies. I would have loved to have gone into the talkies.

QUESTION: What is the relation of man and wife in the spirit world? Are they together, or aren't those things important?

THEIR CHARMS PRAISED

GLORIA SWANSON

GRETA GARBO

VALENTINO: I think it is very important, the relation of man and wife in the spirit world. It all depends on what they meant to each other. If there was great love between them, then most certainly they are united, because you cannot sever love in reality. It is all that lasts. If they did not love one another, but were bound by legal or earthly ties, they may find themselves free from one another at death. If either the husband or the wife had injured the other, they would be bound together until they had worked that out and had come to a harmonious understanding.

Cure After Death?

QUESTION: Is one immediately cured after death of the disease from which he died?

VALENTINO: In a certain sense, most decidedly, because the disease is left off with the physical body, but the mental conception of that disease may remain with the spirit after passing into the astral plane for some time. In that sense, the spirit might be earth bound in the vibration of the disease.

I have seen many instances of that where some spirits seem to suffer from the effects of a disease they had on earth. But that doesn't last very long unless the disease made a strong mental impression.

QUESTION: Do people ever return to this world as ghosts, perhaps?

VALENTINO: It would all depend on what people call ghosts. I would say yes. The earthbound spirits return as ghosts. People see apparitions of them. Very often, when ghosts appear in haunted houses, they are drawing the ectoplasmic force to their astral bodies—drawing the atoms of ectoplasmic force from some human being.

QUESTION: Can you communicate with anyone as you would like, or must you be sent by a higher power?

Many Obstacles

VALENTINO: I cannot communicate with anyone I like because there are many obstacles. I have gone to some of my old friends, stood beside them, touched them, but to no avail. They were not sensitive enough to feel me. Others I have reached almost immediately.

Sometimes those I am used to coming to are shut to me through some depression which makes it impossible for me to get down to the level to which their spirits have dropped. I am not sent by any higher power. I go because I want to talk to someone or because I love them.

QUESTION: Are you thoroughly settled in your present sphere, or will you move on to other places?

VALENTINO: I am not settled at all. I don't know how long I shall be in this sphere where I am constantly learning things that are spiritual. I know I shall progress to higher planes. I know also that there are things I can only learn in the earth world before I can progress to higher planes. I think I shall come back to the earth world before I can ever go to higher planes.

QUESTION BY SURPRISED EDITOR: You mean to be born over again?

VALENTINO: Yes. The earth is the schoolroom of the soul, the lowest class, the kindergarten. You cannot get away from it until you have learned all the lessons in it.

Greatest Star

QUESTION: Who is, in your opinion, the greatest film star today?

VALENTINO: That is a difficult question because people are great in different fields. I do not think anyone has reached Charlie Chaplin's place in comedy. Gloria Swanson is a great artist in her line of work. Also there is that Swedish artist, Greta Garbo. Her husky, throaty tones are wonderful for expressing emotion.

QUESTION: Have you ever returned to haunt your house in Hollywood?

VALENTINO: Yes. I have returned but not for the purpose of haunting it. I have returned to walk around the place and live again the old days in memory. It is the same as when you sit in a chair and think over past days. When we think of a place we are there immediately. In living the old days over again, I have gone to that house and wandered through the rooms, thinking of the old happiness and sorrows. Sometimes people have heard me walk around and have felt my presence.

QUESTION: Had you any premonition that you were going to die?

Awful Mental State

VALENTINO: Yes, I was in an awful mental state. I felt a breaking up of things. I had the feeling that nothing material mattered very much and so I let go of myself. The premonition took that form.

QUESTION: Do you see Lon Chaney? What film folk are your friends now in spirit land?

VALENTINO: I see many of them. There is Barbara La Marr. I have seen Olive Thomas. I see her quite a good deal. I have seen Milton (Milton Sills). He has tried to get in touch with Doris (Doris Kenyon). I have see June Mathis, and her mother, Jennie. I see a great deal of June.

The voice from the medium was becoming a little weak and I hurried to ask the next question, the question which I had placed at the end of the list. What, if any, would be the answer?

QUESTION: How did you die? Was there an justification in the rumors of shooting or poisoning?

For the moment, there was no reply as the medium swayed forward in his chair as if staring at me through his closed eyes. I was about to repeat the question when the answer came—very sorrowfully and a little reluctantly.

VALENTINO: That is very difficult for me to answer because it involves a great many people. I will say that—I did not die a natural death. I am not going to divulge any names. I have no desire for revenge, contrary to the opinion most people might have. I do not wish to have any suffering come to them . . . more than will come to them through natural causes. We cannot do wrong without suffering the consequences (there was a pause). I think I would relieve them—if I could.

(Editor's note: The facts are that reputable doctors of [illegible] standing [illegible] that Valentino did die a perfectly natural death.)

I had no more questions to ask and, while I pondered the last and shocking answer of the alleged Valentino, the medium relapsed into a state of repose and slowly regained consciousness. The pretty stenographer brought another glass of water which George Wehner accepted with a shaking hand. The seance was ended.

HUGE EARNINGS BY HEARST INTEREST

Subsidiary Corporation Has 1930 Net of $4,938,182 Despite Industrial Lull

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 18—Hearst Publications, Inc., subsidiary of Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., showed net earnings for 1930 of $4,938,182.03, according to the report given to stockholders at their regular annual meeting.

This [illegible] dividends [illegible] prior [illegible] on the [illegible] Before [illegible] eral [illegible] earnings [illegible] amounted [illegible] 5 1-3 times [illegible] ments.

OWNS WESTERN PAPERS

Hearst Publications, Inc., all of whose [illegible] except [illegible] qualifying [illegible] held by Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., owns the western chain of newspapers and the American News Paper Company, which furnishes the paper for their publications. The group includes the San Francisco Examiner, the Los Angeles Examiner, the San Francisco Call-Bulletin, the Evening Herald and Los Angeles Record, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer and the Oakland Post-Inquirer.

The only securities of Hearst Publications, Inc., directly held by the public are the 6½ per cent serial first mortgage bonds. Stock of the holding company, Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., however, is being marketed at present through that organization by a customer and employee ownership plan. Its attraction, a 10th month-end bonus, is a preferred issue, paying 6 per cent at the annual rate of 5 per cent.

DEEMED ACHIEVEMENT

Officials of the company have expressed themselves as well pleased with the annual statement made public at the meeting. 1930 represented in many lines of industry a quiet period, and the fact that Hearst Publications, Inc., showed earnings after all charges of nearly $5,000,000 for that year is considered an achievement.

It indicates the position which advertising holds both in good times and bad, and shows that newspaper advertising has a distinct place among the virtual necessities of modern business.

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

William Pfarr

We have a plan by which county taxes might be reduced. This plan is not feasible but that is its only drawback. We would advertise the meetings of the County Commissioners as the best show in town and charge admission.

The commissioners' meeting this week was strangely peaceful and, for that reason alone, was worth witnessing. Certainly it is no daily sight to see Commissioners McGovern and Armstrong and Babcock in unison on one or more subjects. In fact, a shrewd bookie would lay you ten to seven that the three could not agree on the school situation in Abyssinia.

McGovern is, of course, the owner of the finger that stirs up the muddle. His language is not the language of a Princeton professor but he is sincere, if verbose and violent. On the other hand, Armstrong and Babcock, owning more power in their partnership, deal less with words and more with motions.

Uncle Joe (Armstrong) has been too long in politics to be nettled by McGovern and toward him he adopts the air of a friendly uncle reconciled to the faults of his little nephew. Most of McGovern's accusations Armstrong will pass off with a grin and a light word or two, but every now and then Uncle Joe feels the necessity of a defense and he answers in detail. His language is fairly similar to McGovern's and, in addition, he is plainspoken about matters which another man might avoid. For instance, every now and then, if not at a commissioners' meeting then at a banquet, he recalls how the old "Pittsburgh Leader" won him votes by describing him as "Barroom Joe"—a nickname which Armstrong feels popularized him with the people.

The most embarrassing moment in the stage career, thus far, of Harvey Effinmove happened recently when the Players of the Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew Association staged "Credentials."

The audience was enthusiastic as the curtain dropped and applauded the cast heartily. Each member of the cast was called out for a bow, and when Effinmove's turn came it was discovered that he was in his dressing room undressing.

He was dressed roughly in trousers and a sweater when his colleagues dragged him onto the stage, which was set to represent a forest scene, which included a creek, and forced him to take a bow. Then they supplied an anti-climax to which the audience didn't object by tossing Effinmove right into the creek. Curtain.

The women of the Twentieth Century Club heard Dr. William Starr Meyers, of Princeton, tell a story about a colleague who, against his will, made a long trip west.

This colleague, a professor, disliked trains, but decided to go in style—drawing room and all.

He was trying to sleep in his drawing room the first night, but the room was too cold. Irritated, he pressed the button for the porter, to request more blankets.

No answer. He pressed the button again, and again. The room became colder. The professor wrapped his muffler about his neck and crawled into his overcoat. That's how he spent the night.

The next morning, after he had bawled out the Pullman conductor and the porter, he learned that instead of pressing the porter's button he had turned on the electric fan.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb. 18.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Those of the soldiers that need it should get at least 50 per cent of what the government owes 'em, but let the ones that are not soldiers quit hollering for it, on the grounds that it would make the country prosperous. We used 'em in the war when we needed 'em. Now we are using what they saved out of the war to help out the rest of us. Everybody nowadays is suggesting ways of getting prosperous on somebody else's money.

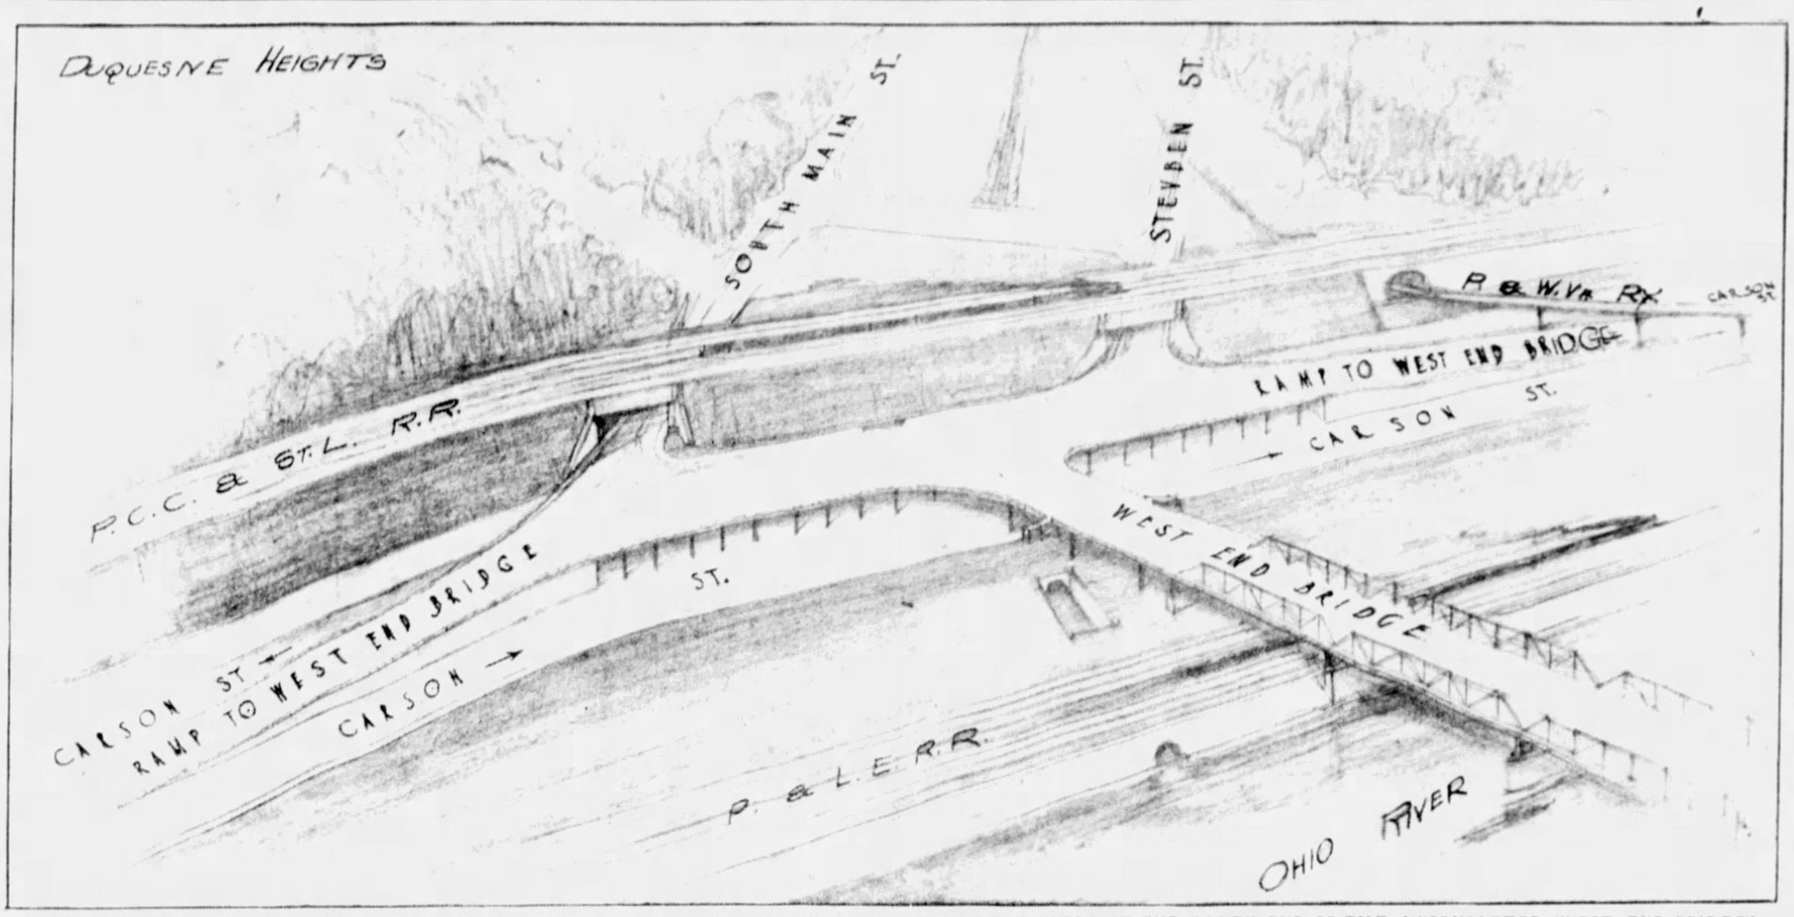
How New West End Bridge Will Distribute Its Traffic Burden at South End



ARCHITECT'S DRAWING OF THE COUNTY PLAN FOR DISTRIBUTION OF TRAFFIC VIA NEW RAMPS AND TUNNELS AT THE SOUTH END OF THE UNCOMPLETED "WEST END BRIDGE"

How traffic streams over the new bridge will turn out Main street to Crafton, Sheridan, Carnegie or out Steuben street to Elliott via ramps while Carson street traffic passes undisturbed below through new one-way lanes of a widened highway. Carson street traffic will reach the bridge via inclined ramps. The present stone arches carrying Steuben and Main streets under the railroad tracks will be removed, but replaced with steel bridges when the two streets are elevated to the level of the new bridge, which in construction appears very high.

CEREMONIES AT OPENING OF LENT

Ashes Placed on Brows of Catholics; Many Churches Set Programs for Season

Many churches of Pittsburgh and vicinity today are observing with special services Ash Wednesday, which marks the beginning of Lent.

In all Catholic churches, the palm branches which were blessed on Palm Sunday of last year were burned, and the ashes placed in a vessel on the altar before the beginning of mass this morning. The ashes were sprinkled with holy water and censed, after which the celebrant placed them on his own brow and upon the forehead of the congregation. Ashes will also be distributed in Catholic churches tonight.

CATHEDRAL PROGRAM

Special Lenten services will be held each Wednesday during Lent at 8:30 a. m. in St. Paul's Cathedral, Fifth avenue and Craig street. Tomorrow in St. Paul's, the Rev. John A. McClory, noted for his radio sermons, will be the speaker. Meetings will be held every Thursday night in the Cathedral throughout Lent.

In Old St. Patrick's Church, Liberty avenue and Seventeenth street, the Rev. James R. Cox will conduct services every noon and evening during the season.

Services were to be conducted this morning in Trinity Cathedral, Sixth avenue, Bishop Alexander Mann was to speak at the special noon services.

The Rev. Dr. A. J. Holl, of the First Lutheran Church, Grant street, was to speak at the noon service in the church which was to be broadcast over WJAS. Meetings will be held every Wednesday during the season, at noon and 8 p. m.

CEREMONIES TONIGHT

Services will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the Second St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Pride street. The Rev. G. W. F. Doege will be in charge.

"The Midnight Journey from Gethsemane to the Council Chamber" will be the subject tonight of the Rev. H. P. Eckhardt, of St. Andrew's Lutheran Church, Center and Morewood avenues. Services will be held every Wednesday night during Lent.

Communion services this morning marked the beginning of the season in St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Forbes street and Craft avenue. Tonight the Rev. W. A. Amos will conduct special services.

TRAFFIC SCHOOL PARLEY LISTED

Plans for the proposed school for traffic officers will be considered at the general meeting of the Better Traffic Committee tomorrow in the council committee room. Frank L. Duggan, general chairman stated that extention of the through traffic street system and revisions of the state vehicle code also would be discussed.

Reports of sub-committee chairmen, the discussion of stop and go signals and the last year's accident report also will be brought up. Committee members are expected to report on a new type of "stop-thru-traffic" sign which will be erected at Murray and Aylesboro avenues for comparison with the present sign. The trial sign uses an incadescent lamp, while the signs in use now utilize neon lights.

RAMP DISPUTE AWAITS PARLEY

Whether the city builds a concrete or steel ramp at the Manchester Bridge as a permanent part of the bridge approach depends on outcome of a conference between the Public Works Department and the City Planning Commission.

The commission has asked Council not to erect a permanent approach because the Point section needs further improvements which might be complicated by a permanent construction now. The present ramp is of wood.

Public Works Department engineers have estimated the cost of a steel ramp at $245,000 and that of concrete at $303,000. Several councilmen favor steel because it is cheaper and is produced in Pittsburgh. Public Works Department engineers say concrete is more durable and cheaper in the end.

Vacant Building Damaged by Fire

Damage estimated at $200 resulted from a fire in an unoccupied two-story brick building at Thirty-eighth street and the Allegheny Valley Railroad early today. The building formerly was used as an office by the Crucible Steel Company.

Pershing Split With Foch Over Troop Handling

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By JOHN J. PERSHING

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

I left London April 25, 1918, and crossed to France in a British destroyer. Col. Mott was at Boulogne with a request for me from Gen. Foch to come to Sarcus. I learned then that the 26th Division, at Seicheprey, had repulsed a severe trench raid on the night of April 20-21, and had suffered considerable loss.

Arriving at Gen. Foch's headquarters I found Gens. Bliss, Harbord and Weygand already there, and after dinner we entered into a general discussion about American troop shipments. The conversation ran as follows:

Gen. Pershing

Foch: "On March 28 you came to offer the services of American troops. I have a vivid recollection of the occasion. As to the American divisions, in what order do you think they should be employed?"

Pershing: "The order would be the 26th, 42d, 2d. (The 1st had already been sent to an active front near Amiens). The regiments of the 32d will be ready by May 1."

Foch: "I do not think they can be used before May 5, but the more we put into the line the better it will be. Your 77th Division has arrived. I see. What about the 3d and 5th?"

Pershing: "The infantry of the 3d has arrived, and that of the 5th will soon follow."

Foch: "What we need now is infantry, especially the British, on account of the present crisis. That is why the Supreme War Council at Versailles recommended that all tonnage be devoted to that purpose for the time being. I hope that America may send over as much infantry as possible during the next three months. The other arms to complete your divisions can come afterwards. What do you think of that plan?"

Pershing Disagrees

Pershing: "I cannot commit myself to such a proposition. If nothing but infantry and machine gunners are brought over, to the total of 360,000, it will be October or November before the artillery and auxiliary troops could arrive, and we could not foresee the formation of an American army until next spring."

Foch: "I think your calcula-

"The youth of America must be taught to develop the will to say 'no' to temptation, if they are to keep out of the paths of crime."

He was introduced by Director of Public Safety James M. Clark. At noon yesterday he was guest at a luncheon by Clark in the Duquesne Club, and spoke on his experiences in detective work.

Wife Believes Stranger Buried as Husband

Believing the body of a man buried three months ago in West View cemetery was not that of her husband but a stranger, Mrs. Eleanor Steuernagel, of 3539 Fleming avenue, North Side, has asked the Missing Persons Bureau to renew the search for her husband.

Last September Harry Steuernagel, 53, disappeared, the wife related yesterday. In his automobile, found on the North Side, was a certificate showing the purchase of a revolver. A will was also found, naming his wife as his heir. It was made out in August, when they sold their $5,000 home in Oakdale road, Ross township.

Mrs. Steuernagel received a note dated September 10, enclosed with a new $20 bill. The note read:

"Good-bye, Nellie: If you and God forgive me I will see you over there."

The body buried in West View cemetery was found near Wexford five weeks after Steuernagel's disappearance. Mrs. Steuernagel, who did not view the body, identified the hat and shoes as her husband's.

Later investigation has convinced her the body had lain in the woods where it was found since before her husband disappeared.

COUNTY TO GET TITLE TO HALL SITE SOON

Possible Court Proceedings Only Obstacle as Kline Signs City Consent Bill

Unless court proceedings are instituted, the Nicola property in Oakland will be transferred to the county as the next step toward construction of the $6,000,000 town hall in Schenley Farms. The hall came a step nearer yesterday when Mayor Charles H. Kline signed the consent ordinance passed by City Council Monday making possible the construction of the hall in the district.

The County Commissioners yesterday authorized the sale of $1,500,000 worth of bonds from the $6,000,000 bond issue for the purchase of the site. With the consent ordinance signed and the money being provided by the county, the next step is the transfer of the property.

E. V. Babcock made the motion to sell the bonds yesterday, specifying that $1,100,000 is to be used for the purchase. His motion was seconded by Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong. Commissioner C. C. McGovern voted no. The remainder of the $1,500,000 is to be used for an early start on construction.

Organizations opposed to the Oakland site are expected to hold another conference this week to plan further opposition.

Leaders in the campaign declared today they are confident the goal will be reached. The funds will be used by the federation through its 17 associated social organizations for welfare work.

How big is

BIG

Is a thousand dollars a big account? Or ten thousand? A hundred thousand?

It all depends—

We figure them differently. A big account to us is the account of any business that operates on sound principles—that pays its way as it goes...that takes advantage of every opportunity.

That's big business to us because it will grow. We will grow with it.

And we have the kind of banking service to help it to develop. The usual service of course...and many that are unusual but extremely helpful.

We'd like to tell you about our services that can help you grow. Please call at the Bank and consult any of our officers.

What We Mean by "compounded"

Here's an example—suppose you put $1000 in a savings account with us ten years ago. Now you would have $1485.78 of which $485.78 is interest.

That's true because it was compounded every six months at 4 per cent per annum.

If we had not compounded it, you would have only $400 interest—or $85.78 less.

The reason is simply that your interest itself starts to earn 4 per cent as soon as it's credited to you.

3 STORES, 2 GAS STATIONS LOOTED BY ARMED BANDITS

GUNMEN ROB NORTH SIDE DRUGGISTS

Gang Visits Three Places, Takes Sub-Postoffice Cash Money Orders, Flee in Auto

Robberies of three drug stores on the North Side, another in Wilkinsburg, and two gasoline stations and a beauty parlor in East Liberty were reported last night and early today.

Herding three employes, including an 8-year-old errand boy, and two customers into the rear room of Lefkowitz Brothers drug store, at 2000 Beaver avenue, three bandits lofted the cash registers of $125 and fled in an automobile.

The same trio proceed to the Faesael Drug Store, at 1336 Juniata street, three blocks away. John A. Faesael and a clerk, W. W. Hodgson, were in the back room when they entered and ordered them to throw up their hands. They obtained $100 from the cash register.

HOLD UP THIRD STORE

Their last stop on the North Side was at the drug store of Thomas Janda, at 1017 East Ohio street. One of the trio took $169 from the cash register while his accomplices held Janda at bay with revolvers.

At the drug store of T. F. McCarthy, at 301 Penn avenue, Wilkinsburg, four bandits lined up W. H. Mitchell and George A. Sharp, clerks, and four customers behind the soda fountain. The safe and cash register were looted of more than $200. From the customers, A. Smith, of Trenton avenue; J. Fuller, of Meade street; James Diehl, of Meade street, and Frank Swisshelm, of 204 Penn avenue, all of Wilkinsburg, the robbers obtained a total of $23.

The Thomas G. Chenney Hair Shop, at 258 South Highland avenue, was visited by two bandits. When Chenney's daughter, Mary, who was in a booth with a customer, heard the cash register being opened she stepped from the booth and was confronted by the two armed men, who rifled the register of $40.

SERVICE STATION ROBBED

Two men held up two service stations of the Gulf Refining Company, at Braddock avenue and Finance street, and at Kelly and Lang avenue, within 15 minutes early today. At the station at Braddock avenue and Finance street, James Harmon, the attendant, was forced to hand over $50, while William McDaley, attendant at the other station, surrendered $25.

3 MILLION BOND SALE FINANCES SCHOOL PLANS

Securities Awarded to N. Y. Syndicate on High Bid; For New Construction

Three million dollars made available to the Board of Education through the sale of bonds will expedite construction in the near future of at least six projects in the proposed building plan of the school board.

The bonds were sold yesterday to a New York syndicate on their bid of 103.8287, a premium of $114,861. The bonds are 30-year serial of 4½ per cent.

Among the projects on which work will be started soon are: Knoxville Junior High School, new addition, the Arsenal School on Butler street, on the grounds of the old arsenal; the Wm. M. Davidson School on West Liberty avenue, named for a former superintendent; the H. B. Davis School on Wightman street, Squirrel Hill, named for a former principal; the Prospect Junior High School, Prospect street, Mt. Washington, and the Lincoln School, Lincoln avenue.

SEVEN GROUPS BID

Seven financial groups bid for the bonds yesterday. They were awarded to the highest bidder, a syndicate composed of E. H. Rollins & Co., Roosevelt & Son, Stone & Webster, and Blodgett, Eastabrook & Co., George B. Gibbons & Co. and Kountze Bros.

The Bancamerica Blair Corporation came second in bidding with a premium of $105,000 on their bid of 103.5. The Bankers Company, and the Guarantee Company, both of New York, came third with their bid of 103.4399, a premium of $103,197. Pittsburgh companies took fourth and sixth places in the bidding.

The Cronenweth Electric Company, Pittsburgh, was awarded the contract for electrical work on the Knoxville Junior High School yesterday. Although their bid of $25,685 was $5,000 higher than the estimated cost, it was $11,000 lower than the highest bid. The company awarded the bid is not a member of the Electrical Contractors' Association.

COMMENTS ON BIDDING

Chairman N. R. Criss and other members of the board believe the bids for the Knoxville job mark a change in the attitude of the association toward bidding. He said that for more than a year members of the association have refused to bid on school building projects. Of the nine bidders on the Knoxville electrical work, six were members of the Electrical Contractors' Association.

YEAR FOR THEFT AND FAKE COINS

Earl McWhirter, 30, was sentenced by Federal Judge Nelson McVicar to one year and a day in the Atlanta penitentiary, upon conviction for transporting a stolen automobile from Bay Village, O., to Homestead, and plea of guilty to an indictment charging manufacturing and possessing counterfeiting 25-cent coins. The same sentence was given in each case, the terms to run concurrently.

McWhirter, on the witness stand, admitted having previously been convicted for burglary and a holdup, but maintained he was innocent of the automobile theft charge. He said the machine he was driving when arrested in Homestead December 19 had been left at his sister's home in Homestead by a former roomer.

A large number of fake quarters found in his possession when arrested were made by him, he said, to play gambling machines.

PERSHING, FOCH DISAGREED OVER TROOPS FROM U. S.

BRITISH TRICK OVER PLANES FAILED

A. E. F. Commander Foiled Ruse to Hold Draft Of Men to Meet Crisis

is rather pessimistic, for we could begin bringing our troops in August but without considering that point we can furnish you with officers and personnel and you can have your divisions organized beginning with October. What would you propose in this connection?"

Pershing: "I think we should limit the transportation of infantry to May and that of artillery and auxiliary troops should come in June. They should not arrive more than a month later than the infantry. Under what conditions would you employ the American units?"

Gen. Harbord fathers units.

Foch: "A final decision cannot be made on that subject. That will evidently depend upon the degree of instruction of the units. In the crisis that is confronting the allied armies it is effectiveness that we lack. The method of employing these units is a question to be handled in due course and according to their efficiency."

Pershing: "I would like to have the conditions under which these units are to be employed determined now and to fix the time during which the regiments and brigades will be used separately."

Foch: "Make your proposition on that subject."

Refuses to Consent

I then explained the nature of the system that was being followed where our divisions were in training with the French and the plan agreed upon with the British. I understood that it was absolutely essential that we should agree what our troops were in training they would go into battle to part of the division with which they were serving.

Gen Foch then said:

"I do not doubt the excellency of the method but in the crisis through which we are passing I return to the decision of the Supreme War Council and I ask you to transport during May, June and July only infantry and machine gun units. Will you consent?"

Pershing: "No, I do not consent. I propose for one month to ship nothing but infantry and machine gun units and after that the other arms and service of the rear troops to correspond."

Foch: "If you adopt the plan I propose you would have by July 31, 300,000 more American Infantry."

Pershing: "You said just now that you would furnish the artillery and even artillerymen, which would be joined with our infantry to complete our divisions. Then why not consent to transport our artillery personnel along with our infantry?"

Foch: "I repeat that it is the infantry of which we have the greatest need at this time. I would like to have Gen. Bliss tell us the considerations which led to the decision taken by the Supreme War Council at Versailles."

Bliss: "The collective note recommended to the United States to send only infantry until the Supreme War Council should give instructions to the contrary. The government of the United States, in conformity with this note and with the recommendation of Secretary Baker, consented to this plan. As far as the employment of the units on the front is concerned, the question should be decided by Gen. Pershing according to agreement with the Commander-in-chief to whose armies they may be attached."

Pershing: "I have been discussing this question of training our units for the last eight months, first with Gen Petain and then with Marshal Haig. The method agreed upon leads naturally to the formation of constituted American divisions."

Foch Fears Delay

Gen. Foch said he wished to see American [illegible] and an American army as large as possible, and that the policy he was recommending would have much to [illegible] an American army [illegible] delay.

"But do not forget that we are in the midst of a hard battle. He was asked that [illegible] understood that if an [illegible] should arise where our troops were in training with the British or French, they would go into the battle and do their part.

I then gave him the numbers to be shipped during May and told him that it had been agreed

My diary notes the following:

"Paris, Tuesday, April 30, 1918. Congress has wisely passed an act providing for indemnity to Allies for damage by our troops abroad.

"On Sunday took up with Jordon of the Ordnance the subject of heavy guns from French, and with Loulois their production of airplanes. Gen. Crozier, back from Italy, favors sending American troops

"Maj. Gens. John L. Hines and Brewster called yesterday, and Martin Egan came for confidential conference."

We were never quite certain of obtaining airplanes and heavy artillery from the Allies as material and expert labor for their manufacture were never fully up to requirements. Notwithstanding the frequent promises the cancellation by the French of our early contract for airplanes created an [illegible] that made it difficult for the planning of our aviation personnel or their participation in operations. So far we had received no planes from home and none from the French except a few for training purposes.

Gen. Foulois

My conference with Gen. Foulois was based on a proposition purporting to advocate closer co-operation with the French, emanating from their minister of munitions M. Loucheur and contained in a letter from the undersecretary for aeronautics.

Proposals Rejected

The Minister suggested that the French should increase their output of airplane bodies of various types and that we should confine ourselves to the production of Liberty engines and possible also undertake the manufacture of a particular type of allied [illegible] motor which they recommended.

Analysis of the proposal showed that, if adopted, we should have to establish [illegible] plants for the manufacture of airplanes at home and furnish the French additional raw material and probably expert labor.

We were always keen for co-operation that would advance the common cause, but production under this plan would not have been hastened. Moreover, the proposition was decidedly advantageous to the French.

Our experience so far had not been such as to give confidence in their fulfillment of an agreement of this sort, so the suggestion was politely rejected.

A few days later a British air representative also sought joint co-operation with us. The proposal he made was that we should limit our construction, other than for training purposes, to long range strategic bombing aircraft and the manufacture of Liberty engines, and that the British would supply aircraft for pursuit operations. The matter was presented to me along with a prepared telegram to be sent to Lord Reading stating that we and the French concurred.

I inquired how it came that the French had agreed to this without consulting us, and it was found that the plan had not yet been taken up with them. I then told the British representative that when the air services of the allied armies reached an agreement regarding this proposal I would consider it. This was the last we heard of it. Such incidents as these showed the tendency to gain advantage and caused us to doubt the sincerity of proposals for co-operation in such matters.

Gen. Loucheur.

Unity Completed

In discussing unity in general, the failure of the Italians to place their armies under the Supreme Command on the Western Front was frequently mentioned and it was feared in high places that there might arise another dangerous situation similar to Caporetto, but all hesitated to take any action.

From the military standpoint the Western Front really extended to the Adriatic Sea, and support for the Italians in case of disaster would have to come, as before, from the armies in France.

The question was a delicate one, but it occurred to me to suggest to the President, through the Secretary of War, that he might intimate to the Italian government the propriety of completing the unity of command by placing its armies under the same control as the others. It was believed that the Italian cabinet might be willing to take the step if it could be done in such a way as to prevent hostile criticism among their own people.

It was thought that if the suggestion should come from the British or the French, especially the latter, it would very likely be regarded with suspicion, whereas none could ascribe any but the highest motives to President Wilson in making such a move.

However, the question came up for discussion at the next meeting of the Supreme War Council which was held at Abbeville, and the authority of Gen. Foch was extended to include the Italian armies. This completed the unity of command from the North Sea to the Adriatic.

Why You Can Drive the New Ford So Many Thousands of Miles

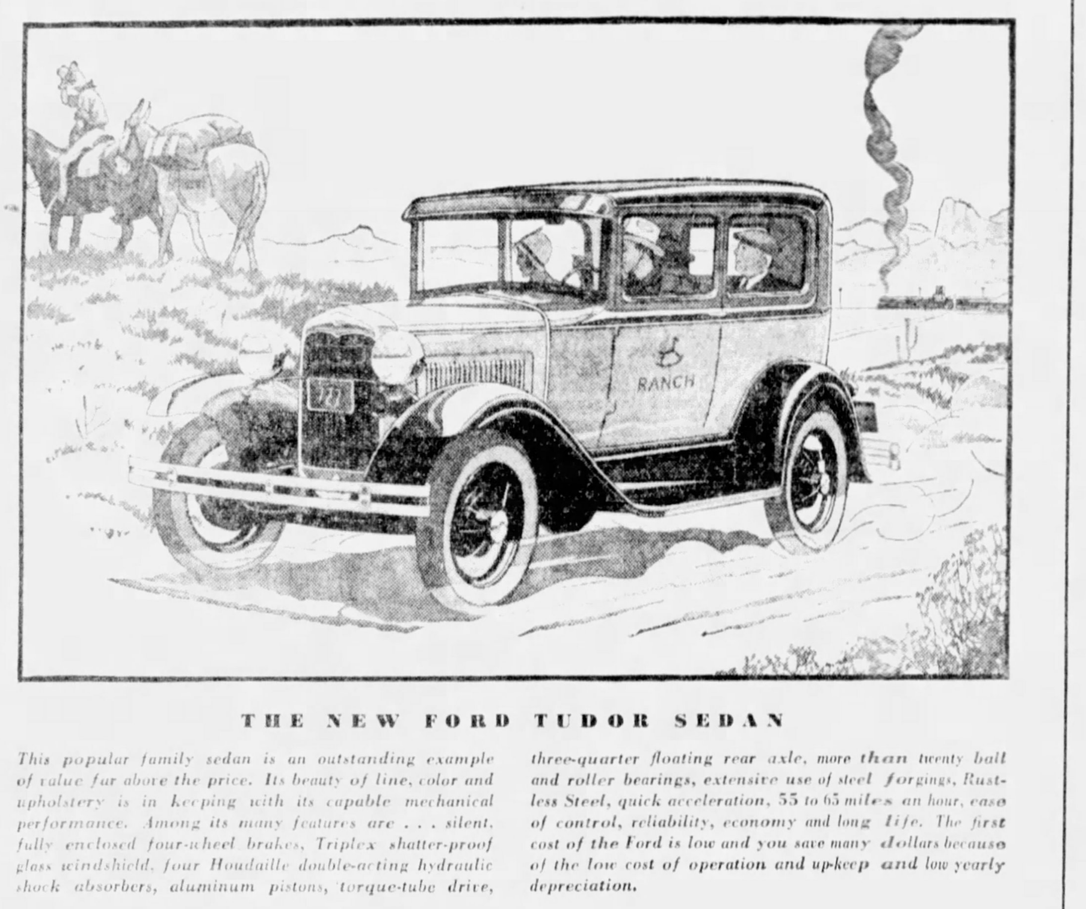
Unusual care in manufacturing is reflected in the smooth, reliable performance of the new Ford and its economy and long life.

THE NEW FORD has made an unusual record for reliability and long life. In police service it has been driven 100,000 and 120,000 miles under the severest driving conditions. Leading industrial companies operating large fleets of Fords report "satisfactory economical service" after many months and years of constant use. The value of good materials, simplicity of design and accuracy in manufacturing is especially apparent after the first 25,000 miles.

Throughout the chassis, you find many reasons for the good performance of the Ford. None is more important than the crankshaft.

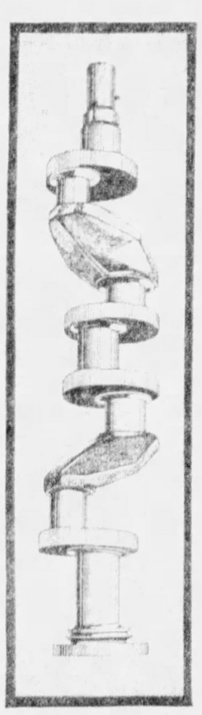
The crankshaft is frequently called the heart of the automobile because of the part it plays in transmitting the power developed by the pistons to the flywheel and driveshaft. It must be properly balanced to insure smooth operation. It must be accurate in size to insure proper clearance in the bearings. It must be true in alignment and weight to reduce friction and give long continuous service without adjustment.

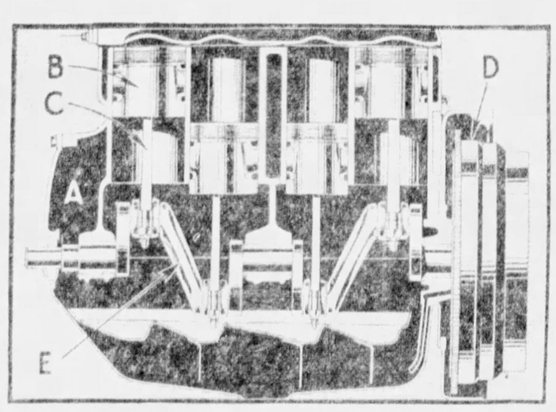
The crankshaft of the new Ford has great strength because it is made of carbon manganese steel, specially developed by Ford metallurgists. It will resist a twisting stress of 2½ tons at a leverage of twelve inches from its axis.



THE NEW FORD TUDOR SEDAN

This popular family sedan is an outstanding example of value far above the price. Its beauty of line, color and upholstery is in keeping with its capable mechanical performance. Among its many features are . . . silent, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, more than twenty ball and roller bearings, extensive use of steel forgings, Rustless Steel, quick acceleration, 55 to 65 miles an hour, ease of control, reliability, economy and long life. The first cost of the Ford is low and you save many dollars because of the low cost of operation and upkeep and low yearly depreciation.





This illustration shows the Ford cylinder bloc (A), piston (B), connecting-rod (C), flywheel (D), and crankshaft (E). The care with which these parts are made is an important factor in the smoothness, reliability, economy and long life of the new Ford.

The Ford crankshaft is made of special carbon manganese steel and balanced statically and dynamically. Ford crankshafts receive more than 150 checks for accuracy.

In the many steps in its manufacture, the Ford crankshaft is machined and polished to measurements as fine as one-half of a thousandth part of an inch. In all, Ford crankshafts receive more than 150 checks for accuracy.

The greatest care is taken to make sure that the Ford crankshaft will be in perfect balance in all positions and at all speeds. The machines for the dynamic balance tests are set upon foundations of gum rubber and are so delicately adjusted that the very air that surrounds them is first cleansed and then held at 68 degrees by thermostatic control.

Though weighing many pounds, the Ford crankshaft is so carefully balanced that it will remain motionless when placed upon two perfectly leveled parallel bars, yet will turn if so small a weight as a ten-cent piece is placed on any connecting-rod bearing.

This same care is followed as standard practice in the manufacture of the Ford flywheel, pistons, connecting-rods, valves, camshaft and other mechanical parts.

You can see, therefore, why the Ford delivers reliable, economical service for so many thousands of miles. It gives good performance on the road because good performance has been built into it at the factory.

MISAPPLIED CONTROL BRINGS GRIEF

THE RETURN OF Pitcher Vernon Gomez to the New York Yankees for another major league trial this year serves as a reminder to baseball men that though control is the most important item in a hurler's repertoire is isn't always because of a lack of it that a young flinger fails in the big show. Sometimes it is because he has too much of it, or misapplies it to his own disadvantage. In that respect Gomez was unique among the slab rookies tried in recent years.

Vernon Gomez

For while the main difficulty with which the average young moundsman has to contend when he is given an opportunity in the fast set is the fact that his offerings go wide of the plate, the troubles of Gomez resulted from his habit of getting the ball over the plate. His main fault was getting his fast ball right over the middle of the pan. The outcome generally was that the batsman proceeded to knock it out of the park or to one of the most distant corners.

PUTTING THE BALL over the middle of the plate doesn't spell good control from the pitcher's viewpoint. In fact, it's just the opposite. It's what old Jock Menefee used to call a wild pitch. Any time Jock put a ball through the center he charged himself with a slip. That was the fault that caused Gomez to be sent back to the minors.

Seemingly it's one extreme or the other with young pitchers. If they're not throwing the pill in the alley they're missing the plate altogether, either because they are just naturally wild or because of their overeagerness to follow the tips of veteran chuckers to work the corners. A wise old head like Waite Hoyt points out that many youngsters think entirely too much about those corners.

"THESE BOYS HAVE heard that it is smart to work the corners," observed Hoyt, who will pitch for the Tigers again this year. "So it is—if you can find them. But first you've got to be able to put the ball over the plate. Then it's all right to go to work on the corners.

"But a young pitcher who aims at the corners first is piling up trouble for himself, because he's winging away at very small targets. Besides, there comes a time every now and then during a ball game when the smart thing to do is to stick the ball right over the middle of the plate for some good hitters.

"BEING SMART, AND all good hitters are smart, whether they know it or not, the batsman will be looking for a ball anywhere but right through the middle. The thing then is to be smarter than he and give it to him. I might add that to do this often takes courage. If he outguesses you and hits the ball it may be hard to convince your manager that you were in there thinking. In developing a young pitcher, after you see he's got it in him you've got to stick with him, talk to him patiently, tell him all you know and help him in every way you can. For a while this seems not to do any good. Then overnight it all comes to him."

Jim Jeffries

WHOM WOULD YOU pick in a battle between Jim Jeffries and Jack Dempsey with both in their prime? Jim Corbett can see nothing to it but a victory for Jeffries. "Jeff was powerful, an ox of a man, he was fast, and what a left hand he developed," Corbett told Ed Hughes.

"I never saw any one who had the crushing power that Jeff could put into that old left jab of his. He could drive you back a dozen feet with a jab. He knocked Fitzsimmons flat with that punch.

"OF COURSE, DEMPSEY would have landed on Jeff. I consider that. But if Jeff could take such a punching from Fitz as he did in their second meeting, Jack's wallops would not have upset him.

"Jeff wasn't nervous or excitable, like Dempsey. Nothing ever bothered him. He was bigger and stronger than Jack, too. Jeff's left to the body or head would have been poison to Jack. No doubt about that. Yes, I believe I'd have to put down the family plate on Jeff in such an argument. He was in a class by himself."

ANOTHER CHAPTER IN the story of Duquesne University's remarkable advance in athletics is written and another stride toward eventual triangular competition among the local colleges is seen in the announcement that Carnegie Tech has scheduled a home-and-home series of two basketball games with the Dukes for next season. Following Pitt's recent action in booking a football meeting with the Bluffites for 1932, the step taken by Carnegie is a most pleasing one and meets with the enthusiastic approval of sports followers throughout the district. It adds to the local card for next winter two of the most popular floor numbers that have ever been offered here.

IT IS SAFE guessing that the hustling John Holohan, Duke graduate manager, will not stop there, but will continue his efforts until he gets his school on the basketball slate of Pitt, too. Then a football game with Carnegie, with an annual agreement all around for the years to follow, and collegiate athletics here will be at the peak of health, thanks to the greatest of all tonics—local rivalry.

It cannot be denied that the Dukes merit the recognition they are receiving. Aside from what Elmer Layden has done in football, Chick Davies from year to year has been developing basketball teams of a caliber to put Duquesne on a level with the best. And he will get his first chance in local big time next year in a favorable season as he will have a splendid lot of varsity material coming up from the present freshmen squad, all six-footers and one of the best looking yearling outfits that ever represented a local college.

ONE OF THE best influences that football has had, first as a player and later in coaching roles, passed in the death here yesterday of Dr. John A. Weibel, former Notre Dame star and for a time line coach at Duquesne and Vanderbilt. He was a credit to the game from the first day he ever donned a uniform.

Wesley Fesler

Dr. Weibel was a guard on Notre Dame's famous team of 1924. Four Horsemen year, and his untimely death after more than seven years of study and just as he was completing his preparations for medical practice, caused the first break in the ranks of that noted eleven. Nobel Kizer, a visitor here last week, played the other guard, the tackles were Joe Bach and Rip Miller, the center Adam Walsh, the ends Chuck Collins, Ed Huntzinger and Clem Crowe, the quarterback Harry Stuhldreher, the halfbacks Jimmy Crowley and Don Miller, and the fullback Elmer Layden.

THE BASEBALL TRAINING season will see an unusual number of college players trying out for berths on the major league clubs, but according to Pat Flaherty, former Carnegie citizen and Pirate pitcher and now a scout for the Chicago Cubs, a prospect as good as any in the lot will not be heard from until later. He refers to Wesley Fesler, all-American footballer and all-around athletic star at Ohio State. Flaherty says Fesler has natural baseball ability in addition to his rare speed and looks like a boy who could be developed into a big league star.

HOME-AND-HOME GAMES CARDED; GENEVA BOWS

By JESS CARVER.

Yesterday was a big day for the Dukes. First, they find out that they've landed on Carnegie's basketball card for next year, and that they'll play the Tartans a home and home series; and then this year's varsity goes down to New Brighton and takes Geneva, 28 to 26, securing sweet revenge for the defeat passed out by the Covenanters here two weeks back.

John Holohan, the graduate manager, and Chick Davies, the wild-eyed court coach, are receiving the congratulations today, which they are accepting with their usual grace. But you still ought to hear Davies on the block and the officials.

DATES UNSETTLED

The announcement of the Tech-Duke series came from Buddy Overend, Tech's graduate manager. Definite dates will be settled later. The announcement of the victory over Geneva was made by Ganzy Benedict, brilliant forward, who played one of the greatest games of his career as he led the locals to the triumph over the Beaver Valley entry.

The contest at New Brighton was another of those last-half-rally affairs, which are becoming so popular this year. It was all Geneva during the first half, with Cliff Aultman and Manning featuring the attack with three goals each. The Dukes, with Bunk McGeever out of the lineup, couldn't seem to hit at all successfully, and at the intermission, as Chick Davies went after the officials, his club was behind 20 to 12.

BENEDICT STAR

Benedict, intercepting passes, passing more accurately than he ever passed before and popping away every time an opportunity presented itself, carried his team along by the sheer force of his own sparkling and dominant play as the second half got under way. While it remained for little Davey Wilder to sink the goal that brought the victory, it was dependable ole' Ganzy who was the real hero of the fracas.

Duquesne scored steadily, cutting down the Geneva lead point by point until the count reached 24-23. Brud Stephens was fouled and he made it good, tying the count, and a minute later he put the Bluffites out in front with a basket popped from the foul line.

Manning, who had been scoring very consistently, came through with a long one to throw the ball game back into the throes of a deadlock again and as the minutes ticked into seconds, it looked for all the world like we were going to see some extra time.

Duquesne's passing, always dangerous and bewildering, had its desired effect, however, and with just 35 seconds left to play, the boys worked Wilder into the open, well out on the floor, and Davey came through, his shot swishing through without going through the formality of saying "howdy" to the rim.

GENEVA FALTERS

The Covenanters were outscored in that second half by 16 points to 6, the markers coming in goals from the court by Fair, Manning and Grahame.

Coach Davies employed a new lineup idea from the middle of the first half on, benching Parry and Pawlina, the latter having been subbed at center for the ailing McGeever, and shifting Abele to the pivot spot, with Snubber Irwin at forward and Wilder at the guard. It was as effective an arrangement as he has used this year. The lineup:

PITT CONFIRMS TOUR REPORT

An announcement that the Pitt basketball team will tour to the Pacific Coast next winter, made exclusively in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph last Saturday, was confirmed by W. Don Harrison, graduate manager of athletics at Pitt, today. The trip will be made during the Christmas holidays.

The program for the tour is likely to include 11 games. Indiana, Purdue, St. Louis, Kansas, Utah, California, Southern California and the Los Angeles A. C. will be met in the order named, according to the tentative chart.

Three games will be played with Kansas, where Mike Getto, former Pitt all-America tackle, is assistant grid coach, and two frays are listed with the U. S. C. Trojans. The Los Angeles A. C. was scheduled because Charley Hyatt, former Panther floor ace, is playing with that organization.

That was after the town had recovered from going Federal League crazy, forcing him to withdraw to Richmond, Va., with his great International League champions. . . . He came back to pick up where he had left off. . . . Schmidt went to Boston and helped the Miracle Braves to win the world series of 1914. Ruth became the outstanding figure in baseball and Dundee now is a resident of Newark, N. J., and the leading contender for the world middleweight championship. . . . While in Baltimore, all of these men learned there is much truth in the old adage that a prophet is not without honor except in his own country as they listened to the jeers of derision of the natives.

They tried to book a Pittsburgh exhibition, but so far no one has come forth to underwrite a guarantee for their appearance here. . . . Eddie Jacobs, of Baltimore who was ranked No. 12 among the men's singles players in the National tennis ranking list for last season, announced a few days ago, still is a student at the University of Pittsburgh, as also is his younger brother, Billy. Eddie will be graduated in June. He is a southpaw player who began his career on the public courts of his home city. In 1929 he defeated Johnny Doeg, the new No. 1 ranking player and National champion of 1930. Last year he won over R. N. Williams, the famous internationalist, who then was ranked No. 11 and now stands as No. 13, and gave Francis Hunter some tough tussles, in which victory hung in the balance by slender margins. Only 37 players are ranked in men's singles for last season and only such famous stars as Doeg, Francis X. Shields, Wilmer Allison, Sidney Wood, Jr., Clifford Sutter, Gregory Mangin, George M. Lott, Jr., Ellsworth Vines, Jr., John Van Ryn, Bryan M. Grant, Jr., and Berkeley Bell are listed ahead of Jacobs.

And now she's dead from a fall caused by a broken trapeze ring while performing in Copenhagen, Denmark. . . . Al (Chick) Janetti, killed in a holdup at Wilkes-Barre, was a boxing promoter in that town and formerly in Philadelphia, where he broke into the game as a water boy at Jack McGuigan's famous old National Club during his days of starring as a high school athlete. . . . His last appearance in a boxer's corner was last Thursday night, when he seconded Tiger Thomas in the latter's victory over Dave Shade at Wilkes-Barre.—HARRY KECK.

BOXING SHOW POSTPONED

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

An epidemic of cancellations today caused Promoter Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, to postpone his boxing show, scheduled for tomorrow night, until Thursday night of next week.

Joe Trippe, of Rochester, N. Y., who was to meet Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, in the 10-round main bout, reported he was down with a cold, and Tony Marino, of Duquesne, carded with Young Ketchel, of Steubenville, in the opening bout, has a similar ailment, while Lloyd Clements, of Swissvale, matched with Buddy McArthur, of McKeesport, in the semi-final, has been forced to break training.

McGirr said the show had drawn the largest advance sale of any arranged by him in two years and he did not want to go through with a card filled with substitutions. He hopes to have the program intact for next week.

ENS TO LEAD SMALL SQUAD WESTWARD

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

A sure sign of the approaching baseball season will appear tomorrow morning at 9:50 when the vanguard of Pirates leaves the city in the direction of the California training camp. A dozen persons will make up the small squad in charge of Manager Jewel Ens. Only seven of the number will be athletes, the others being club attaches and newspapermen. The departure will be from the Pennsylvania station.

Steve Swetonic and Glenn Spencer, pitchers; Rolly Hemsley, Eddie Phillips and Joe Bird, catchers and James Dempsey, an outfielder who starred for Verona of the County League.

NEW ROUTE FOR BUCCOS

Spencer arrived unexpectedly yesterday. Glenn was slated to join the party at Chicago, but the Binghamton youth decided to come to Pittsburgh instead.

Ens and his travelers are due to reach Chicago at 7:25. There they will have about two hours, part of which time will be used in transferring the party to the Chicago and Northwestern Station. At that place the group will be increased and at 9:35 the enlarged entourage will roll on towards Omaha. The Union Pacific will take charge of the travelers at the Nebraska city. From Ogden to Paso Robles the players will be in the keep of the Southern Pacific.

In eight years of training at Paso Robles the present season is the only one in which the Pirates have used a northern route by which to reach the well-known state in the Far West. It has been the custom to travel to Los Angeles, there to head northward for the training site. On this occasion, the players will enter California by way of Sacramento and Oakland.

DUE AT CAMP SUNDAY

The vanguard is due to reach Paso Robles Sunday afternoon about two o'clock. At various points en route, additions to the party will be noted so that when the athletes land at Paso Robles they will represent a considerable array.

Manager Ens does not contemplate any workout for Sunday, but the camp will ring with excitement on Monday morning when the initial practice session will be held.

The second squad is slated to leave Pittsburgh next Wednesday. It will proceed by the same route to the training camp.

PIE IN 'FRISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 18.—(INS.)—Pie Traynor, third baseman of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and his bride were visitors in the Bay district today. They will remain here for a week and then go to Paso Robles, where the Pirates will go into spring training.

SPORT SHORTS

CHESTER, Wis., (AP.)—Rather than accept a $5,000 salary cut, Horace (Doc) Ellenbecker, Reds outfielder, says he won't quit baseball. Doc says the Reds "have treated me the same contract four times in the last three years, and three times he has returned it unsigned." The Reds' president, Sidney Weil, the "south paw," he said, "refused to even discuss that the Reds sell me to some other major league club that pays a man, and not an employee baseball."

INDIANAPOLIS.—(AP.)—The Indianapolis Baseball Club, of the American Association, has sold Howard Freigau, shortstop, to the Indians, to the Mobile Club, of the Southern Association.

ATLANTA, Ga.—(AP.)—Paired with Jimmy Gordon, Bobby Jones is taking a three weeks' separation since his retirement November 1, a total hall match here today against Fritz Ehrgen and Herb Barker, as the match was the motive.

PALM BEACH, Fla.—(AP.)—Diana Fishwick, Great Britain, defeated Miss Louise Beineman, New York, 4 and 3 to go into the quarter finals of the annual Palm Beach women's golf championship yesterday. Kathleen Garnham, also from England, defeated Mrs. L. C. White Cohasset, 1 up, 4 and 3. The co-medalist of the qualifying round, Mrs. Stuart Hughes, Detroit, went down to a 2-and-1 defeat at the hands of Mrs. E. M. Troustine, Chicago.

ERIE, Pa.—(AP.)—Erie will make formal application for a franchise with the New York-Pennsylvania Baseball League, it was announced today by Chief Erie was a member of the league last season, but has definitely dis-

HAZLETON, Pa.—(AP.)—President Basil Ferry of the Hazelton Mountaineers, of the N. Y.-Penn League, has announced that G. A. Salzmann, of Pittsburgh, in association with several other men of that city, had taken out an option to purchase the team. The deal likely will be consummated within the next 10 days.

ST. LOUIS.—(AP.)—The condition of Ban Johnson, former president of the American League, last night was described as "very low" by his physician, Dr. Hyland, who is attending him at St. John's Hospital. Serious intestinal complications, however, Dr. Hyland said Johnson was in no immediate danger.

GAINESVILLE, Fla.—(AP.)—The University of Florida will meet the University of California in a football game at Los Angeles next Thanksgiving, Edgar Charles Jones, athletic director, has announced.

LOS ANGELES.—(AP.)—Walter Berger, whose batting gave the Boston Braves no end of trouble last season, has announced he has signed a one-year contract and will leave today for the training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla. Accompanying Berger will be one of his former fielding mates from the Los Angeles Club, Wes Schulmerich, who was sold to the Braves in a $40,000 deal last fall.

In fifth place in a ball game of four teams, the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets today are the result of the 1-0 triumph over the Detroit Olympics at Duquesne Garden last night.

The victory extended the local puckmen's consecutive string to four wins and two ties and marked the sixth time in six attempts that they have downed the Detroiters this season.

The Cleveland Indians, victors over the London Tecumsehs recently at London while the Jackets were idle in the Pittsburgh here set up a three-cornered already tie for first place in the league standings, with the Pittsburgh sextet in fourth place, a point behind Cleveland, one behind London and two behind Buffalo, the league leader. Cleveland maintained its one game lead over Pittsburgh by climbing into the third notch, but

MAY PASS LONDON

Both Cleveland and London have played one game more than has Pittsburgh. In the event that the Jackets hand the Olympics another setback in Detroit tomorrow night they will pass London and the Cleveland for third place, and each of the hot players will have played the same number of games.

Fourth place is the last position that gets a team into the play-off series so it can be seen that the Jackets are in a good position to demand a crack at the championship.

Eddie Rodden, diminutive center who registered two unassisted goals to flatten the Olympics when they appeared here last month, added insult to Detroit injury by registering the only goal in last night's tussle. After 14 minutes and 53 seconds of play in the first period Rodden carried the puck into Detroit territory and passed it back to Capt. Tony Gregg as he rushed in toward the Olympics' cage to receive a pass. Duke McCurry accompanied Eddie into the scoring zone and Gregg passed the disc in the direction of his mates as they reached the goal mouth. A Detroiter was hanging on each of McCurry's shoulders when the puck stopped at his feet. Unable to get free to shoot, he pushed the puck to Rodden, a few feet further out and Eddie broke loose from various and sundry wrestling holds applied by various and sundry Olympics long enough to slap the disc into the Detroit goals.

RODDEN STARS

At the start of the second period, and again at the beginning of the final stanza, Rodden broke through the Detroit defense and let go hot shots started right at Goalie Vernie's feet. The Olympics' net guardian each time proved equal to the occasion, however, and he was no less tough on Whitey Fields, Leo Reise and Mill Halliday, who also broke through and had only the goalie to beat.

The Olympics, strengthened by the acquisition of Frankie Frederickson, former Pittsburgh Pirate player-manager, and Sammy McAdam and Ernie Kenny, former New York Rangers, didn't give in without a struggle and Dame Fortune had to give Goalie Allen Cox two sweet smiles to help him keep the Pittsburgh goal from becoming acquainted with the puck. Gilhooley and Steele, Detroit forwards, each hit the goal post with shots that appeared to carry scoring tickets. The goal post is less than an inch in width so figure out for yourself how close the Olympics came to tying the score.

Cox, handicapped by an attack of flu and running a temperature of about 100, performed brilliantly in the final period when Detroit kept the puck and five Olympics in Pittsburgh territory for minutes at a time. Iron Man Gordy Fraser and War Horse Leo Reise showed no signs of weakening at their defense posts. If it's any news to this great defense, the Pittsburgh opposition has been held to five goals in six games and if it's any news to you that's less than one per game.

The Jackets are to be the guests of Detroit, Buffalo and Syracuse before their next home appearance, against the Windsor Bulldogs on Thursday, February 26. The lineup:

Pittsburgh		Detroit
Cox	Goal	Vernie
Fraser	Defense	Reise
Reise	Defense	Fields
Rodden	Center	Gregg
McCurry	Wing	Halliday
Gregg	Wing	Kenny

Substitutes: Pittsburgh, Quelette, McIntyre and Gilhooley; Detroit, Steele, McAdam and Frederickson.

Referee, Hewitt; Umpire, Gilhooley. First period, Rodden, Pittsburgh, unassisted, 14:53. Second period, McCurry, Pittsburgh, unassisted, 3:00. Third period, Fraser, Kerr and Rodden, Pittsburgh, unassisted, 14:53. Penalties, White, Gregg, Quelette.

LONDON, Feb. 18. Cleveland gained third position in the International Hockey League standings by outplayed London 5-2, here last night.

Building Up Big Fights

CHAPTER XXXIII

Fate seemed determined to have me on the hunt for an opponent for Jess Willard. It would have paid Willard if he had fired me to do something else. I really landed the opponent indirectly, for I was working hand in hand with Tex Rickard in smoking out such a man. Rickard accepted Dempsey on my say-so. Fulton still was on Tex's mind, despite the knock-out by Dempsey.

Following that Dempsey battle, Fulton had gone out West. He was trying to break away from Mike Collins, his manager. Fulton wanted me to manage him, but, as I was a friend of Mike, I couldn't very well butt in. I wired Collins about his contract on Fulton and he replied that it had only a short time to go, but if I cared to take over the Fulton headache, it would cost me $1,500 and his blessing. He said he was fed up on Frederick the Great.

Fred Fulton

I told Tex about it and he said:

"You got that feller Fulton I still think he can fight. He might have run into one when he fought Dempsey."

"Yes, I'll say he ran into one—a couple of them," I replied.

"Well, something tells me he is a contender just the same. You can go him. Ike. I'll give you the money to buy him."

FULTON "CONFESSES"

Well I was just about to telegraph Collins my acceptance of his ponderous plasterer when out of a clear California sky came Fulton's astounding confession that he had been mixed up in a couple of crooked fights on the Pacific Coast. He had confessed to Marion Salazar, sports editor of the San Francisco Bulletin.

In the confession he alleged he and Dempsey had "agreed to go 10 rounds" and he had been "double-crossed by Jack Kearns."

It wasn't the first time such a charge had been made by fighters who had encountered Dempsey, but right or wrong, the laugh always was on the fighter making the bleat. Dempsey always got his man, and no matter how the other fellow squawked about being "taken off," labeled "double-crossed" or "tricked," the public looked up to the wrong. It was the poorest kind of an alibi for being knocked out, and it never went over big with the fight fans.

FANS WITH DEMPSEY

Fulton's confession was a sensation for a time, but when he attempted to drag Dempsey into it he got the horse laugh. Mike Collins, who was Fulton's manager when the bout was fought, declared that Fulton had told an untruth.

"He is just a big, yellow quitter and always was scared stiff any time he met a puncher. He didn't like it. Dempsey beat him fairly and squarely and can do it every hour of the day," Mike said.

The confession put Fulton right out of the running. Rickard would have had him back in there somehow, but Tex wouldn't spend five seconds with a self-confessed faker. Tex traded in public confidence and he wouldn't have anything to do with a fellow who would even admit that he had agreed to "go easy" with an opponent. To say that he had promised to hit over so gently against Jack Dempsey was laughable in itself.

Subsequent battles put up by Dempsey showed how much truth there had been in Fulton's confession insofar as the Dempsey part of it was concerned. Kearns might have conned Fulton to get him into the ring, but the result was all that counted.

Fulton never was a factor after that bit of hubbub. He had the size and the punch to be a world champion but he wasn't made of the proper stuff. He could hit and I am ready to admit had the best left hand since Corbett's time. He could hit just as hard with it, harder, in fact, than Dempsey could, with his, but Fulton didn't have the fighting spirit that Dempsey possessed. It was that same tiger makeup that made Dempsey the greatest heavyweight of all time.

WILLARD FORMIDABLE

I suppose Rickard wanted Fulton around in case anything happened to Dempsey. Tex wasn't any too sure that boxing authorities around the country would permit the match between Jack and Jess. The Pottawatomie mule-puncher was such a giant. The Man-Mountain, they had dubbed him—that it did seem a pity to send little Dempsey after him. Jess was a fine boxer for a big man and the trouble with all of his opponents had been their inability to break through his guard. Jack Johnson with all of his fame as a right-hand uppercut specialist, found he couldn't uppercut Jess. You can't get power behind an uppercut that has to travel up to the jaw of a man who is 6 feet 7 inches tall. That was what licked Johnson. He got blew up trying to uppercut Willard. It was his best punch, and when he found it useless he was like a man without arms.

Tex was foxy enough to foresee possible objection to the match. If there were to be croakers and red-nosed obstetricists to such a match they would be sure to harp on the hopelessness of a modern Jack the Giant Killer trying to do a picture book act. It didn't seem possible to Tex. I'm sure of that, and while he knew Dempsey was the goods, "own thumper, he just couldn't satisfy himself that Jack could whip Jess. If it turned out to be a slaughter of the little fellow, Tex knew it would do great harm to himself and boxing.

That's why I say then that Tex was anxious to have Fulton in readiness to step into the breach if he couldn't make terms with Kearns or if there was objection to the match.

Of course the fight itself proved how silly it had been for Tex to worry about Dempsey. Jack soon brought Willard down to the size of Jimmy Wilde and then it was easy.

However, had I made the deal with Collins in time and Fulton had joined me without letting out his coyote solo, I might have been in there with Fulton and walked off with the title.

WEST PENN LOOP MEETS TOMORROW

By TOM BIRKS

Big league scouts appear alive to the amount of talent on the Pittsburgh sandlots this season for with five of the best-looking prospects already signed and only half way through February, a record number of local boys will be fighting for fame and fortune by the time the training season rolls around.

In past years pitchers have been holding the limelight in the early season signatures, but in the five already signed, one infielder and four outfielders have caught the eye of the big league scouts.

Joe Hadley, Hood Gibson, Letty Schneider, Dick Goldberg and Chuck Forquar all appear to have a fine chance of staying in the big time, and all are well known on the local sandlots with the possible exception of Schneider.

Hadley has rejected an offer from the Waterloo (Ia.) Club of the Three-Eye League, but may sign with the Harrisburg Club of the New York-Pennsylvania circuit.

FORQUAR STAR

At least four boys have been approached to sign for spring training, and according to Honus Wagner, three have the making for big league material.

Since Honus sent Powley to the Giants, he has been flooded with requests to look over home town phenoms but the former star feels that Powley and Forquar are two of the greatest young ball players he ever has observed.

Tomorrow evening the first meeting of the Wagner leagues will be held. In these days of business depression it is hard to say just which teams will return to the West Penn circuit, but one personnel director of a large industrial corporation told the writer that a team will be formed in his district.

WEST PENN MEETS

The West Penn probably will have Verona Community its first champion; the Homestead Aces, one of the greatest teams ever formed; Whitaker, Wilmerding, North Bessemer and Universal, of last year's organization. Two new teams and a well-known organization of many years' standing have signified their intention of attending tomorrow's meeting.

The Central loop will convene at Wagner's on Friday evening, and that will bring the best teams in the Pittsburgh district together. Exitex, last year's champions, will be back with the Lincoln Civics, the Beckman Motors and other clubs are expected to rejoin.

The Beaver County Baseball League will hold a meeting in the Municipal Building, Beaver, tonight. Plans for next season will be discussed.

Weibel Services In Erie Tomorrow

Funeral services for Dr. John Weibel, former Notre Dame star and recently assistant football coach at Duquesne University, who died yesterday in Mercy Hospital following an operation for appendicitis, will be held from his home in Erie tomorrow at 10 a. m. Friday.

STEEL OUTLOOK IMPROVING

NEW YORK, Feb. 18. The Iron Age in its weekly summary of the iron and steel trade tomorrow will say: A more cheerful tone prevails in the iron and steel industry.

Favorable developments of the week include a spurt in steel buying by the automobile industry, greater tin plate production, more liberal rail and track accessory specifications, the release of pipe line tonnage held up by cold weather, an impressive upturn in sheet orders and a better tone in the wire trade following rather general rains in drought affected agricultural areas.

The change for the better in automotive steel requirements is so sudden that there is doubt whether it is merely a flash in the pan or marks the beginning of a general recovery in motor car business.

The Iron Age pig iron composite, influenced by reductions in the Valleys, has receded from $15.88 to $15.71 a ton, the lowest point since July, 1921, when it was $11. Finished steel is unchanged at 2.142c a lb.

Statistics on Fixed Trusts Misleading

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

RETROSPECTIVE ANALYSES of all fixed trusts usually paint glowing pictures of continued high yields and of appreciation in the value of shares. In a previous article in this series on fixed trusts it was stated that such studies are apt to be misleading.

Fixed trusts are such newcomers to the investment field in this country that they have little record of past achievement. To supply this deficiency the trusts have made statistical studies covering periods of 10 to 20 years. These studies assume the formation of the trust with its present holdings at some time in the past and plot annual income and variations in price.

Naturally the indications of such studies are always highly favorable. To begin with, no stock would be placed in the investment portfolio which did not have an excellent history. Some of the cumulative trusts show appreciation of several hundred per cent in their retrospective analyses. Such statistical pictures, if taken at their face value, are likely to prove misleading to investors.

Looking Backward

IT IS AN EASY matter to look over investment history and to make a collection of high grade stocks which have had rapid growth. It is quite another matter to pick a list of stocks which will show corresponding growth over the next 20 years.

Anyone forming a fixed investment trust 20 years ago and applying the same standards used today probably would end with a very different list of stocks. Most of the fixed trusts have United Steel in their portfolio. If these trusts had been formed 20 years ago they might have omitted this stock. It will be recalled that Steel common was mostly water when the corporation was formed early in the present century. In 1910 the stock would not have had enough background to give it a place in a fixed trust portfolio.

Choice Industries Changed

A TRUST FORMED 20 years ago probably would have had a share of its holdings in textiles, tractions and coal companies. All these industries have traveled hard roads in recent years. On the other hand, the inclusion of motor stocks in one of these prehistoric investment trusts would have been improbable.

In the light of our actual knowledge of changed investment conditions it would be difficult to say what stocks would have been selected as the cream of American corporations back in 1910. But it is quite certain that a large proportion would have been eliminated as unsatisfactory by the present time. Enormous development in the good stocks would probably more than balance the mistakes, but the actual results would not be likely to duplicate the retrospective pictures of present fixed trusts.

Moderate Growth Expected

THESE STATEMENTS HAVE not been made to imply that the investment trust idea is wrong. The theory is perfectly sound and the individual buying fixed trust shares should have better than average results. What is meant is that the investor, who takes retrospective statistics at their face value, will be disappointed. The cumulative trusts may be expected to give increasing yields over a period of years and also to provide enhancement of capital in proportion to the growth of the country. But a gain of 500 per cent in value is too much to expect in a world where Santa Claus is a myth.

In view of the fact that all of the holdings will not turn out well, we must also alter appraisals of distributive trusts. The retrospective analyses of these show the dissipation of capital nearly balanced by increased value of original stocks. If some of these original stocks fall by the wayside, the dangers of the distribution of capital become of increased importance.

Under the favorable conditions of a retrospective analysis, the distribution of capital through the sale of stock dividends and split-ups does not greatly impair the investor's principal. But under the less favorable conditions of actual results this dilution may become serious.

Earnings of Industrial Firms for First Half Likely Unfavorable

IT IS likely that earnings of many industrial companies during the first half of this year will not be favorable. ... A confident attitude seems to exist in business circles. Improvement has not been outstanding but steady and gradual in some important lines. This fact is being emphasized by those who insist industrial betterment will be the important underlying factor in the market later this year. Whereas 1929 was a year with an early spurt, followed by a drastic recession. It is the general hope that the business curve in the current year will be slightly upward but steadily maintained.

Interests identified with the management of Allis-Chalmers insist that the net profit of $2,664,603, equal to $2.86 a share on the 1,258,400 shares of common stock last year, was a satisfactory showing. That compared with $4,330,888, or $3.44 a share, in 1929, and with $2,933,909, or $2.33 a share, in 1928, figuring on the basis of the present capitalization. The company entered the current year with unfilled orders of slightly more than $13,000,000, which was a small increase over those held 12 months previously.

Interest has been aroused in the probability of increased foreign business for Trico Products in the future. That is due to the fact that the company has officially announced royalty contracts with the largest accessory manufacturer in England. Trico has extended its operations in that country to take care of a larger foreign business. Naturally, that step is likely to be reflected in increased earnings from that source during the current year.

Mathieson Alkali has been effected thus far this year by uncertainties concerning the outlook in the chemical industry because of price cutting in some of the products. The company did well in 1930, with earnings of $2.96 a common share, compared with $3.31 in 1929, when business conditions were considerably better. Most importance is attached to the strong financial condition of the company. It has been figured that the indicated total book value applicable to the 650,436 shares of common stock was in the neighborhood of $18,000,000, which is equal to nearly $28 a share on the stock.

Mary Lou Seeks Job as Invalid's Companion

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Mary Lou Thurston, beautiful orphan girl of the "home" type, lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson. The former is private secretary to a publisher and the latter an engineer. Mary Lou looks after Billy, their small son. Larry Mitchell, young newspaper reporter, is Mary Lou's pal. Mary Lou is happy, but vitally restless. Larry appears on the scene, rescues Billy from peril in traffic, makes a date with Mary Lou for the next day and dashes off in his pursuit of news. Sanderson gets a chance to go to the Orient on a big engineering project and take his wife as secretary of the expedition. What Mary Lou will do is a problem and she is to stay temporarily with Grandma Jennings, Clara's mother. Larry is eager to marry Mary Lou and take care of her, but Mary Lou refuses his offer. The Sandersons and Mary Lou go to Grandma Jennings' home for dinner and to make arrangements for the journey. The Sandersons start on the trip. Mary Lou asks Larry to help her get a job.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER V.

Larry's enthusiasm seemed to affect even his gay, red hair, for it stood literally on end, due to the vigorous thrust of his hands through it, and Mary Lou, catching fire, felt her heart beat faster and her eyes mist with excitement as she looked at the neat little advertisement Larry had marked for her with bold, colorful slashes of editorial blue pencil.

"Wanted," she read; "companion for semi-invalid. Must be young, strong, healthy, optimistic. Must have sense of humor. Must have pleasant voice and be able to read aloud well. Knowledge of French and music desirable. Complete surrender to circumstances necessary and even disposition. Athletic training, love of sports also essential. Excellent salary, beautiful surroundings, permanent position. Apply in person, Lorrimer Westmill, Connecticut."

Understands French

"Well!" he answered on a long breath, echoing Larry, yet with an astonished, almost dubious echo, confronting boldly with his crisp, inquiring utterance.

"What's the matter with the girl?" Larry asked the atmosphere, "has she been struck dumb or something? Ain't it grand, Miss Thurston? I ask you! What could be more perfect? Get a load of this, if it hasn't penetrated!"

And snatching the paper from her still damp little paw, he proceeded to read the advertisement through with stops, pauses and intonations guaranteed to impress the most unenthusiastic.

"Of course," cried Mary Lou, recovering herself, "it's perfect. I—why I don't have to write anything!" she began, until Larry interrupted, with heavy sarcasm:

"Nothing at all but French and a complete understanding of Bach, Beethoven, Victor Herbert and Gershwin!" he reminded her rapidly. "How about it?"

"That's the only thing that worried me," he admitted.

"Oh, I talk French pretty well and read it even better," she said almost casually. "I spoke very well as a child and have tried to keep it up. As for music, I do play a little. Didn't you know that? That part's easy. That's what amazes me. It might have been written right around me," mused Mary Lou.

Larry's long legs gave way under him and he sat right down in a low chair and stared at her with earnest admiration.

Discusses Requisites

"Blithering violet," he addressed her, "how about the even disposition business? That worried me, too," he went on, enjoying himself amazingly, "also what of this complete surrender to circumstances and a sense of humor? And the pleasant voice? Is your voice pleasant, Mary Lou, and how well do you read aloud? Of course it sounds like a swell break out I came down here all primed to see how we could gamble our way out of these difficult requirements. But I need not have been anxious. I never knew you were such a modest little thing, Mary Lou," Larry continued, quite gravely.

But Mary Lou was not deceived.

"You've listened to my voice for years," she informed him, "and so far you haven't had any ear trouble. As for my even disposition, I've tolerated you for some time, haven't I? And the sense of humor. Ask you, could any girl who hadn't a sense of humor inflict herself with your company a couple of times a week?" The surrender to circumstances, she went on, soberly enough, "well, I guess I've proved that. I have had to be pretty adaptable."

Larry laughed.

"You win. Joking aside, it's perfect and the job might have been made for you. I wonder what your invalid is like, though? Some querulous, highbrow old dame, I suppose, heaven help you."

"Maybe it's a young girl," Mary Lou said dreamily, "pale and pretty and unhappy."

"That being the case, I'd think about applying for the job myself," Larry assured her. "No, it's probably some nervous breakdown author of text books. I can just see her long and lean, like a squirt of vichy, with gray-yellow hair and bilious eyes and a way of bursting into French. 'You know, Ooo-La! La!' cried Larry, briskly. 'Pazzez-moi le menu et toute de suite, snappy petite potato. How's that?'"

Interested in Athletics

"You're an idiot," remarked Mary Lou with absent-minded affection, "and I hope she won't be anything like that. I'd die. It would be worse than Aunt Adelaide," she commented, lowering her voice, "and anyway, I think she must be young. Look what it says about athletic and all."

"How good are you at that, beyond wearing out Shore road for the sake of your schoolgirl complexion?"

"So you have. Your stance is swell, you look like a sizzable bankroll, your approach is wild, your drive is short and your putts not so hot."

"You know perfectly well that I swim at the Y all the year, and for five years almost, I have managed evening gym or basketball. So don't be silly!"

"That's that, then. The Perfect Companion." He pulled a time table from his pocket. "Here you, you brisk right up to town on the 8:23 tomorrow. I'll meet you if it costs me my job. You can get a train to Westmill about six minutes after you make the big dash from Penn Station to Grand Central. All will be take. It's about an hour out. Very swell place very Greenwich. You get me? And if the Lorrimer family is the one I've heard about they have so much money that no matter how much of it you ask for, it will be a mere flea bite."

Mary Lou spent the rest of the day sponging and pressing her best tweed suit, with the perky little fur collar, for which she had saved so long, and had bought a year ago. She even let the hem down a bit, having read in the fashion magazines that skirts were to be nearer the ground.

She went out at last, to round up Billy and give him supper and put him to bed after her evening job of reading Peter Bunny to him was completed.

Later, she went downstairs to help Gram with the supper dishes and to spend a long evening with her and Aunt Adelaide. Adelaide lay plump and prone on the couch, as usual. Gram was knitting, sitting erect by the round table, her work held under the lamp, and so Mary Lou read the evening paper aloud to them.

Reads to Adelaide

Tonight Mary Lou read them, wondering if her next invalid would have such strangely morbid tastes. The only time Aunt Adelaide ever left the little house was to go to a funeral. There were far too few for her in Oakdale; it seemed a strangely, almost perversely, healthy locality.

Mary Lou had told Gram and Aunt Adelaide about her possible position, had shown them the advertisement, while Adelaide speculated alertly on the probable cause of the invalid's ailments. She hoped, she said, that it wasn't tuberculosis, so catching and, as she had said time and time again, Mary Lou's color wasn't a good sign. No matter what anybody else might think! And if paralysis, did Mary Lou believe herself strong enough to tug, haul and lift?

Goes to City

It's a wonder Mary Lou's nerve stood this much. She found herself thinking that a course of Aunt Adelaide would be enough to prove any one's disposition or serenity. But finally Aunt Adelaide lapsed into a gloomy silence, sensitively pondering on the fact that it was just barely possible that this unknown shut-in might be a little worse off than herself. But she rallied soon and dismissed the unworthy doubt.

The next morning Mary Lou regarded herself in the mirror. Hatted she was warmly skirted and jacketed, with the new frilly jabot she'd bought recently, succumbing to the sudden return to femininity, even with tweeds. And her shoes were shined and her stockings runless and her gloves at just the right stage of newness worn off. Shabbiness not-set-in. Yes, she looked all right! Her cheeks were bright with color and her pert little nose well powdered. She touched the stopper of the perfume bottle Larry had given her last Christmas back of her little ears. It was lovely perfume, lasting but not cloying, and she was glad she'd been so penurious with it, using it only on state occasions.

When she reached the New York station she hurried along looking for Larry so intently that, after all, she didn't see him until she walked directly into his arms.

"No way," said he, "for a Perfect Companion to act! Hurry up, we'll snatch a taxi—"

DAILY TRUE STORY— 'Wise Guy'

Bert and Tom were grandsons of the old man and lived on the famous old Wickes farm with him, having been maintained by the old man since they lost their parents some years before.

"The Old Boy isn't as spry as he used to be," Tom remarked as they saw him hobble out to watch the harvester being put through its multiple paces on the upper wheat field.

"No, but then when you are 80 I don't believe you will be as spry as you used to be."

"Hick."

A few days later Tom brought up the subject again.

"Sure's preaching. I'm going to get out of this," he declared, "and what's more, I'm expecting to take Mary Ellen along with me."

Mary Ellen Saunders, who lived in the village and owned a little notions and dry goods shop, meant a very great deal to Bert. At the same time he knew that Tom was fond of her and he did not know just how he stood with her.

Quizzed by Cousin

"Yes, sir," Tom went on. "I'm expecting to take Mary Ellen with me. I plan to head for New York. You put Mary Ellen into one of these new-style dresses and she'd knock 'em cold in New York."

"Has er—is Mary Ellen anxious to go?" Bert asked, rather timidly.

"Go? She'd go with me, wouldn't she?"

"Would she?"

Bert wanted to remind him that Mary Ellen had "kept company" with him as much as she had with Tom.

"Well, good luck to you—if you can fix it up with Grandpop," Bert said.

"I've got a plan—leave it to me. There's something under my hat beside alfalfa seed."

Tom Peterson took his "idea" to Grandfather Wickes, and he hit on the best of all plans—the line of attack being that he was laying his cards face up—making a full confession of everything.

He was more than a month thinking it over and Tom didn't dare to hurry him. Old Man Wickes was taking more notice than ever of his two grandsons and he came to the conclusion that whether Tom was right or wrong about his ability to go to New York and make a fortune in some big commercial enterprise, he certainly wouldn't amount to shucks on the farm while this yearning to become a rich "city feller" was on his mind.

"Well, Tom," the old man finally said, "I rather reckon you're right. Long's your heart and what you consider to be your mind is set on going to the big city and running Morgan and Rockefeller ragged, you'd best go ahead. I can give you eight thousand cash, and that will be your full share. You'll sign papers stating that you take this amount instead of waitin' for whatever I might leave you."

"That's wonderful, Grandpop."

Proposal Refused

"P'raps 'tis, and p'raps it's tough on you, time will tell."

Tom drove down to the village to see Mary Ellen Saunders, and to tell her of the great and glorious fortune that had come to him. He told her all of his plans.

"Probably you are right, Tom," Mary Ellen said, "and I agree with all of your plans except the marrying me part—I wouldn't go to New York to live anyway, and I never included you in any marriage plans I ever considered."

After looking around for a while he managed to get in with a firm of importers, a small firm which was glad to take five of his eight thousand and give him a partnership.

Now and then he wrote to his grandfather or to Bert and always described his gigantic strides toward success. Already a partner in a big New York commercial house, he would soon buy out the company and become a powerful financial figure—according to his letters.

Grandfather Wickes finally died.

When, a year later, Bert sent him the announcement of his marriage to Mary Ellen, Tom wrote a cheerful but patronizing letter and sent them an ornate silver vase.

Tom was beginning to prosper. He was far from becoming a millionaire, but he was making a good income and saving some money.

Five years had passed since he left the farm. He had been working hard and a good long vacation was coming to him.

"Like a farm, eh?"

"Hate farming, but I want to knock 'em cold. I got a hick cousin there and he married a girl I thought I was sweet on once. I want to go out there in style and show 'em something. I want to get a laugh out of the old pump and the kerosene oil lights and the hair-cloth furniture—you know, worsted mottoes and steel engravings of Grant and Lincoln—get the idea?"

"I got you—you intend to knock 'em cold, as you said."

Tom decided to drive out. He got a moderate priced car, painted canary yellow and flashy, he rigged himself out in rather sporty attire and started.

This burned him up. He explained at length about his partnership in a big commercial firm and drove on to the farm.

But the farm was changed entirely. The house was stone and stucco, Norman effect, with hedges and lawns. A servant told him that Mr. and Mrs. Wickes were down at the Hillville Golf Club.

Mary Ellen recognized Tom when he alighted from his canary yellow car but he didn't recognize her, she was so radiant and beautiful and quite up to the minute in her clothes. She called a nurse who was wearing the conventional English nurse costume. Nurse presented Bertie, Junior.

"Where's Bert?" Tom managed to ask.

Tom's Visit Short

"He's tied up at a bank meeting. He's president of the club here and on the board of directors of the bank and they are having a sort of meeting. Come on home and wait for him."

Mary Ellen with son and nurse-maid got into a long maroon imported car adorned with a liveried chauffeur.

"Bert will come on in his auto, we each have to have a car," Mary Ellen explained.

"You've just got time to dress," Mary Ellen said.

Tom remained two days and then told about an immense business deal that demanded his presence. They gave him a hearty sendoff.

Back in his office the senior partner said: "Well, did you knock 'em cold out on the old farm?"

"I'll say I did," Tom answered him.

Tom was like that.

Usually if the jumper fails to go through he instinctively releases the stick with one of his hands and there is no harm done. CONFESSIONS OF A CONFESSIONS WRITER

Until a confessions writer has been cast into the gutter she cannot hope to become a success. I do not like to boast, but I will say that I was cast aside in almost less time than it takes to look up the words and write it.

How thrilled I was. How proud! We had barely met. I saw him emerge from a taxicab. His tall hat rested at a jaunty angle on his wealth of honey colored hair. He wore a cape, and in his white-gloved hand he carried a gleaming black walking stick. His small patent leather slippers and white spats completed his faultless attire. Whirling he tossed the taxi driver a gold coin. Whirling again, he found himself looking into my eyes. I had twined my arms around his neck.

"Who are you?" he asked.

"Just a confessions writer," I whispered, "who wants to be broken on life's wheel."

"Oh!" he exclaimed. I closed my eyes while he negotiated with a street urchin to fetch an empty barrel. By this time quite a crowd had assembled. When all was ready he unlocked my embrace, and, crying, 'Allay-oop!' he tossed me head first into the barrel. In a moment he had vanished through the revolving door of his club.

I had attained the first goal in my struggle for success. I was in the gutter.

(Ed. Note—The author will climb out of the gutter in the next instalment.)

Public Utilities Investigation Brings Admission of Need for Change in Methods

A curious situation has developed with the decision of the House of Representatives to conduct an investigation of the public utilities companies in addition to and independent of that which is being made by the Senate.

The two-sided inquiry may bring confusion and conflict; on the other hand it may develop the truth more fully than would otherwise be the case. With the Senate committee supposed to be partial to the utilities and the House committee supporting Gov. Pinchot, the utilities' chief accuser, nothing is likely to be overlooked that will throw light on the controversy.

The Senate investigation has proved its value at the outset by bringing admissions from John Fox Weiss, chief counsel for the Public Service Commission, that a change in the commission's methods would be helpful to the people.

Mr. Weiss admitted that often the public was not represented at rate hearings, and that a bureau to defend the interests of the people in utilities matters was needed.

He admitted the Public Service Commission was not as "keen" or "alert" as it should be to serve the public, and that there was undue delay in deciding cases.

He admitted that the procedure under which utilities companies may increase rates, and, even though formal protest is made, may continue to charge the increased rate pending adjudication of the complaint by the Public Service Commission, was unfair.

If the Senate inquiry should accomplish nothing more, it will have proved the public is not getting a square deal under present conditions.

The next step will be to see that it DOES get a square deal.

Desirable Legislation

Constitutional Amendment Should Be Adopted to Permit Special Assessments for Subways.

Since it is hard to imagine any reasonable objection that can be offered, in its revised form, to the proposed constitutional amendment under which property owners directly benefited by the subway would be specially assessed to pay for its construction, it is to be presumed the measure will have easy sledding in the Legislature. Certainly it should have.

George S. Davison, chairman of the City Transit Commission, which sponsors the proposal, undoubtedly is right in ascribing the defeat of the measure, when it came before the voters before, to lack of understanding. It came before them with a number of other amendments, and the citizens did not discriminate but opposed the meritorious along with the rest. Pittsburghers strongly supported the assessment measure.

It is true the original proposal authorized special assessments for all kinds of public improvements. If that was objectionable, the objection has been obviated in the new plan, which limits the assessments to transit projects.

It is a fair proposition and warrants the support of everyone.

A Mischievous Tax

Tax on Capital Gains Tends to Upset Business Stability and Make Workers Lose Jobs.

Economic instability makes unemployment and causes breadlines and soup kitchens.

Consequently technical provisions in the federal income tax law which intensify upward and downward swings in business have a direct bearing on the welfare of millions who do not understand tax matters and do not realize their effect upon the general welfare.

In British tax procedure and in the tax procedure of ALL other countries capital gains are NOT taxed as income.

All other countries but our own distinguish between INCOME, which is a more or less steady receipt of funds from a more or less regular source, and capital gains, which are an increase in actual capital due to profit taking on more or less speculative investment.

At first blush, it would seem that only the prosperous classes are penalized by the tax on capital gains; but a more penetrating study discloses the fact that this impost encourages inflation in periods of prosperity and conversely deepens depression in periods of adversity. Thus the tax on capital gains tends to upset business stability and throw workers out of jobs.

It leads them to assume that it is proper to regard stock market profits and gains on real estate transactions as part of current and constant income, which may be freely used as purchasing power.

This has the effect of exaggerating buying power in good times, and depressing it abnormally in poor periods.

With the British exchequer setting a better example, the English are more inclined TO SPEND INCOME ONLY, and to apply capital gains to principal.

Two years ago, 10 months before the panic—A. H. Wiggin, eminent New York banker, warned against the American confusion. "To an undue extent," Mr. Wiggin cautioned, "in recent years, the American people have been selling capital assets at a profit and necessarily treating the profit as income . . . A substantial part has been spent in current consumption, and the volume of consumer demand has undoubtedly been increased thereby . . . Neither the government nor the business world can afford to rely upon an indefinite continuance of a rising stock market."

Since 1921, Secretary Mellon has urged Congress TO REPEAL OR REDUCE THE CAPITAL GAINS TAX.

The present high tax tends to induce individuals to postpone taking profits, in which the government will share. This hesitation helps to make securities and other property rise unjustifiably high during booms.

On the other hand, during great slumps, the same tax provision, which permits deductions of losses from current income, induces additional selling to establish tax losses when liquidation is already at a climax.

Six months before the panic, Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the National City Bank of New York, in a special bulletin, advocated: "Immediate action by Congress to remove the income tax on capital gains on the sale of securities, and at the same time, of course, eliminate the tax credit resulting from tax losses. In this tax lies, we believe, one of the prime causes of the present difficulties."

Unfortunately, the warnings were not heeded.

Drawn by Hal Coffman.

All women and some men will be interested in this drawing. It pictures a problem as old as history.

Nowadays it is a more common problem than it has been in the past. Marriage ties are more easily loosened than formerly, and the whirl of modern life tempts many to break them completely.

Such separations, however, rarely bring happiness to anybody. Most of them end in disaster.

To avert such disasters don't listen to the "whisperer." No matter how harmless he may sound he spells trouble.

OUR BABY NEIGHBOR, EROS

The small heavenly bodies known as asteroids, of which more than 1,500 have now been listed, have a particular interest for us, chiefly because of their minuteness. The fuse-asteroid, Ceres, was observed just 130 years ago. They range in diameter from about 480 down to three miles in diameter. For special reasons, the asteroid known as Eros possesses a value of exceptional astronomical possibilities. During the nights of January 30 and January 31 of the present year, Eros has approached nearer to the earth than any heavenly body with the single exception of the moon.

In August, 1893, Dr. G. Witt of Berlin, detected a "trail" on his photographic plate, indicating that an asteroid had been "trapped at last." It was first given the name 1898 D Q, but later, when its character as an asteroid was definitely established, it was given the name Eros and the number 433.

It differs from the other asteroids, which are found to be between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. Eros revolves almost entirely within the orbit of Mars. As this was the one discovered by Dr. Witt, of the Urania Observatory, some wag suggested that it be named Brevitas, as being the sole discovery of Witt!

Much interest was displayed in Eros at the time of its discovery and for some time afterwards, as it bade fair to reopen the question of solar parallax. A favorable opposition of Eros affords an opportunity for redetermining solar parallax, and in consequence arriving at a more accurate determination of the astronomical remic—the distance from the earth to the sun. It is said that Eros was accidentally caught on a photographic plate at the Harvard College Observatory, in 1892.

Although many photographs of Eros were made after its explicit discovery in 1898, they have not afforded sufficiently accurate data for a satisfactory determination of solar parallax. The observations made in 1900-1901, resulting in thousands of photographs have, however, given us one of the most accurate values of solar parallax yet found. At that time Eros came within a distance from the earth of slightly less than 30,000,000 miles.

Eros is a tiny object no larger than 15 miles in diameter. At its greatest distance Eros is far beyond the orbit of Mars. During the last two days of January of the present year it has been somewhere between 15,500,000 and 16,000,000 miles distant from us.

It appears, even through a small telescope, as a star of the seventh magnitude. An excellent diagram of its recently traversed path through the stars, drawn by the famous astronomer, Crommelin, is found in the astronomical work, "Splendour of the Heavens."

Eros presents a fine pointimage and may now be easily seen through a binocular. The astronomical unit is not known closer than within 100,000 miles. Astronomers at many observatories have been and are now busily watching Eros, in order to determine from the resulting data, more accurate information regarding solar distance, the earth's mass, the power of the moon's gravitation and other scientific puzzles. Eros spins about on its axis once in every five hours and 16 minutes. It will never again be as near to us as it it now is until the year 1975.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

ever since life has been one disappointment after another.

Why must it be? Why must people—why must life—always fail you?

They don't!

You're not really looking for people. You're not really looking for life. You're looking for escape from life—an escape from reality. You're afraid of reality.

As a young child, as a growing man or woman, you lived in dreams. Dreams of a world which should be what you wanted a world to be. Beautiful dreams, comfortable dreams, flattering dreams, in which you were always the radiant heroine or hero, unbothered by tiresome chores and disagreeable people. No worry, no strain—no exasperating conflicts or competition.

As a child, as a growing man or woman, you lived in that dream world. It was your escape from the world of reality which you were too timid, too lazy, too conceited to face. And now you want to continue to live in that dream world. You don't realize that fact. You think you're all grown up—a regular person leading a regular life.

But you aren't. Part of you is still a dreaming child, shrinking from reality. Unconsciously you compare all the conditions of your daily life, all the people you meet, with the conditions and the people in that lovely dream world. Always, of course, to their disadvantage!

For, of course, no flesh and blood persons could be so perfect as the creations of your fancy. They're bound to be much more stupid and unkind. They're bound to laugh at you, bore you, say unpleasant things to you, demand difficult things from you. And so you cling to your dreams and turn your face from real life.

Why do people and life constantly disappoint you? That's why. Because you're living in dreams.

Snap out of it! You were meant to live—then give life a chance! Come away from your make-believe world and your make-believe people. Have the courage to look at life as it is, and people as they are. Brace yourself to meet real conflict and competition.

That virtue of originality that men so strain after is not newness, as they vainly think; there is nothing new. It is only genuineness.—Ruskin.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—No section of Manhattan is so richly steeped in attractive lore as The Bowery. Yet its glower reflects none of its brighter past. Today it seems a highway of bread-lines, pawn-shops and cheap-john stores—a haven for the submerged tenth.

In the beginning it was an Indian trail and later Bowery Lane. The Bouwerie and then its present name. The town sports raced their spanking bays there until banned by special ordinance. In 1802 huge posters proclaimed "a bull baiting" at the Minor Theater.

Sunday afternoon brought out a grand promenade, comparable to Fifth avenue today. The two hotels of the period were there—Bull's Head Tavern and Black Horse Inn. Gallants sat out front in cane-seated chairs and admired passing belles in hoop-skirts.

The famous theater of the epoch was The Bowery, at the Bowery and Elizabeth street, built at the stupendous cost of $105,000. The stage was 100 feet wide "to permit cavalry and water spectacles." The troupe which opened the playhouse included Edwin Forrest and Mr. and Mrs. George Barrett.

Prices, after a long wrangle which stirred the town, were finally fixed at 75 cents for box seats, 37½ for the pit and 50 cents for the gallery. In 1830 a toe dance was introduced by Mme. Hutin which drove out the pious en masse in a burst of righteous indignation.

Charlotte Cushman made her debut there as Lady Macbeth. John Drew and the elder Booth were also among the theater's famous players. Theatrical history was clouded by bloody riots. In 1849 was a clash between partisans of Edwin Booth and McCready at the Astor Place Theater.

One gang marched from the Bowery Theater to attack the Astor Place Opera House, defended by militia, and in the riot a number were killed and 200 wounded. No one knew exactly what it was about. Nobody ever does in a riot.

* * *

In those '80 days two high-priced taverns were Brandreth's, at Broadway and Canal, offering rooms for a dollar a day and the Astor, which charged $2.50 a day on the American plan.

* * *

A magazine editor forwards this bit from an amateur writing contest which I think is swell: "His name was Andy Pettijohn and he covered his bald spot with long thin hairs and gazed too frequently upon the mule when its was white."

* * *

He was a tiresome speaker whose platitudinous prattle began to pall. Frazier Hunt on my left whispered: "What a firm grasp he has of the obvious!"

* * *

Charles G. Norris tells of a pretty young saleswoman recently married into the social whirl. At a dinner she sat opposite a haughty, superior lady. After looking the bride over from across the table the lady cooed: "I seem to remember seeing you somewhere." The ex-sales lady beat her to the punch with: "Certainly, I used to sell you gloves."

* * *

They were discussing the tireless verve of a notorious yes-man long attached to a movie executive, who has been slated for the toboggan. "When this yesser hears the news," observed Herb Howe, "he's going to show a sinking ship's bull rat something nifty in scampering."

* * *

As a matter of fact my sympathy is large for those who have to toady through life. For many years I yessed city editors with all the obesiance of a sycophant. Due to the indifferent ability that was mine this cleavage seemed the only way to hold a job. There is one ogre who has me bluffed to this day. Although we have gone separate ways, when I see him I find it difficult not to approach him with a slow crawl stroke.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Tomorrow

Tomorrow, ah, the countless songs
That trusting poets sing
Of all the golden fleets of joy
Tomorrow's dawn will bring!

Its moments will be brimmed with bliss
Of which no heart can tire;
It comes full-laden with the fruits
Of sad today's desire.

Tomorrow bears rich recompense
For every toil and grief,
And men can wait with patience since
The flying hours are brief.

Tomorrow will at last fulfill
Hopes unattained as yet,
And it will be undimmed, untouched
By any vague regret.

So courage dwells with us always
So close, across the horizon,
Tomorrow's beacons burn!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy
